MAN SEIZES LIVE WIRE SMETILVY ON THE HUNT

Palms of His Hands Burned Through, Will Be Useless.

Doctors Wonder That He Escaped From Death Owing to the High Voltage of Electricity the Wires Carried—William Wills Fell From a Yacht Mast He Had Repaired and Confronted Death Twice.

Twice Confronted Death. Toronto, July 5.—William Wills, aged 19, after repairing a National Club yacht yesterday afternoon, climbed to the top of the mast to test it. Something caused him to reel and slip down the mast. He clutched at two wires which hung overhead to save himself from a fall. They were carrying a high voltage of electricity, and his scream of agony brought help. One man picked up a board and struck the wire which Wills could not let go of and then his grasp loosened and he fell to the deck with an awful cry. One hand is burned throughout the palm, and the other is in almost a bad shape. The doctors at the Emergency Hospital wonder that the man survived the shock. The hands may have to be amputated.
