CIVIC HOLIDAY, AUGUST 9.

Preparations for the big civic holiday celebration are already pretty well advanced, and everyone is going right in to make it a day to be remembered—and it will be just what the people want it to be, for they are making it themselves. So dig in and do your share towards getting a slice of the $125 of prize money, or help somebody else to do it; and incidentally get a few flags to hang out and make the old town gay. See big bills. Also programmes, which will be out to-day.

The Salary Grab.

What is now—apparently by general consent—known as the "salary grab" has been the subject of much editorial comment since its perpetration at Ottawa on the 17th inst., and no paper approves it or even excuses it in its entirety. The addition of $4,000 to the salary of the premier, who has hitherto received only $8,000, is not thought unreasonable, as there are numerous and heavy demands upon his purse, as well as various expenses incidental to his position, of which the general public know nothing, and a moderate increase of judges' salaries is not objected to; but all the other items are more or less vigorously condemned. The Hamilton Spectator says:

"We think the increase in the indemnity of the members was a mistake, and that Mr. Borden missed another chance for a good stroke of political work when he agreed to the increase, and when he did not refuse to accept the $7,000 offered to the leader of the opposition. Careful men have gone to parliament, and have taken home with them a large portion of the $1,500 indemnity. Extravagant men would take nothing home if the indemnity were $100,000. Long sessions make no excuse; it is the fault of the members that the sessions are long. The present session was unduly lengthened by reason of the parliament undertaking work with which it had no legal right to interfere.

"But the pensions to ex-members of the crown is utterly indefensible. There is no precedent for it, and if there were there are many precedents that should not be followed. Under the British system the ex-minister, to obtain a pension, must make declaration that he is poor. A similar arrangement here might possibly be defended. But the idea of paying rich men like Clifford Sifton $6,000 of the people's money every year so long as he shall live and is in the House, and $3,500 a year after that, is superlatively preposterous. The idea of paying Sir Mackenzie Bowell a pension of $4,000, in addition to his senatorial indemnity of $2,500, is absurd in the extreme. Or take a poor man—John Costigan, for instance. This professional politician is to have the handsome annual income of $6,000 of the good money of the people of Canada—rather a swell dose for a man who has never done anything for his country beyond drawing salary!

"If the times were not exceedingly good in this country, these things would never have been thought of; but they will be thought of by the people when the inevitable reaction comes. And it is nonsense to blame the present government for this absurd throwing away of large sums of people's money, for every member of the House, Grit and Tory alike, had his finger in the pie, and the leader of the opposition could have warded off the grab if he had chosen to do so."

The "grab" has given rise throughout the dominion to an alarming conviction that the public treasury is at the mercy of our politicians, who can help themselves to some of its contents whenever they think fit, and several papers hint at what will happen to them at the next election. A bad feature of the grab is that it was conceived and carried out near the commencement of the life of a parliament, and that, if the parliament last its natural term, every M. P. will receive $4,000—or is it $5,000?—more than he virtually agreed to accept for his services when he became a candidate. The Globe thinks the increased indemnity will tempt better men into the political field; but we do not: if it do, nearly all of them will be defeated. When an election is coming on, the people of a constituency do not select as candidates the most able or honest men, but the ones most likely to win; and in many—perhaps in nearly all—constituencies there are men who would make desirable representatives, but who, if they ran for parliament, would stand no chance whatever of getting elected, because they do not possess the qualifications which, though they should count for nothing, count for everything in the estimation of thoughtless and narrow-minded voters. The aspirants to a seat in parliament fought hard for it when it was worth only $1,000 a year, and still harder when it was increased 50 per cent.; and, now that it is $2,500, the fight for it will be fiercer than ever, and we fear that bribery and corruption will increase, despite the stringency of the laws against them. What particularly disgusted us about the affair was the "round robin," which shows that all the signers were afraid to incur the odium that they felt would attach to any of them suspected of having taken a prominent part in the game of grab. The only thing the conspirators had to fear was public opinion, and we are inclined to think that at the next election a good many of them will find that their fear was well grounded. They should all be "fired" without mercy.

The demand for raspberries is more than equal to the supply, but we may be thankful for the crop as it is.

Mr. Alex. McGee has made quite an addition to his farm machinery, as he has purchased a hay loader and a side-delivery rake.

St. James' Church.—Mr. A. C. Collier, at present in charge of the Hastings parish, will exchange with Rev. A. S. Dickinson on Sunday next.

JUDGE O'LEARY.—For some time past it has been rumored that Mr. Hugh O'Leary, K. C., of Lindsay was likely to receive a judgeship, and at a sitting of the Cabinet at Ottawa on the 20th inst., an order was passed appointing him to fill the vacancy on the Bench at Port Arthur. The Post says: "Mr. O'Leary is an able lawyer and will make a good judge," and we say so too.

S. S. EXCURSION.—The union excursion of the Baptist, Presbyterian and Salvation Army Sunday schools of this village will be run to Chemong, per steamer Esturion, on Friday, Aug. 4th. She will leave the wharf at 8 a. m. sharp, calling at Sturgeon Point, and returning at a reasonable hour in the evening. Tickets: adults, 35 cents; children, 25 cents; children of the Sunday schools, free. All are invited.

A BIG EXCURSION.—A double-headed train of eleven coaches was required to carry the Grand Trunk Employees and Public Library excursion from Lindsay to Haliburton on Tuesday, and a good many went from the Falls and Kinmount. Of course there were sports, lots of them, and a good share of the prizes came to the Falls; but the baseball match between Lindsay and Fenelon Falls had to be called off on account of rain.

A LOCAL ITEM.—The first thing we heard, when we came up town on Monday morning, was that a young couple who had attended the Methodist church, on Sunday evening had afterwards driven to Bobcaygeon, accompanied by a relative, and got married; and the general opinion was that the girl had incurred the responsibilities of matrimony at almost too early an age, as she is not quite 16. However, it is nobody's business, except the contracting parties' and their friends'; but as we are always on the look out for local items, which are seldom numerous, we hereby thank the youthful pair for furnishing us with the raw material for one, and wish them "much joy." Next.

AN ARBITRATION.—Our village council and the Lindsay Light, Heat & Power Co. not being able to come to terms with reference to the assessment of the company's property here, an arbitration was decided upon, and on Friday last Judge Harding, of Lindsay, Judge Weller, of Peterborough, and Judge Benson, of Cobourg, were here, and commenced to take evidence, on which to base their decision, in Two-way's hall. Mr. McLaughlin and Mr. McDiarmid were counsel for the village, and Hugh O'Leary, K. C. and Mr. O'Connor for the company, and the testimony of a cloud of witnesses was taken down by a young lady stenographer. The proceedings lasted all Friday afternoon and the greater part of Saturday, and the decision is to be given to-day, the 28th.

ACCIDENT.—On Wednesday of last week Mr. Edward English, of Fenelon, met with an accident which we did not hear of until after the Gazette was printed: He was cutting his clover, which was so thick that it hid a hole in the ground, into which a wheel of the mower dropped, and he was thrown off it on the left side, but, rather strangely, fell upon his right arm and shoulder. Though no bone was broken, some of the muscles were severely bruised and swelled terribly, and the pain became so severe that he had to take morphine to allay it. He was in town on Saturday night, and we hope to soon hear that he has entirely recovered from the effects of the accident.

A CHILD SCALDED.—On Thursday of last week, about noon, a serious and possibly fatal accident occurred at Mr. John Rutherford's, in the township of Verulam. Outside the kitchen, and near its door, there is a shed in which cooking is done in hot weather, and Mrs. Rutherford had been par-boiling some slices of salt meat in a frying-pan. After removing the meat, she carried the pan out of the shed, and, just as she was opposite the kitchen door, her youngest child, a boy about two years old, rushed out and came into such violent contact with the pan that the almost boiling water it contained was spilt over his head, face and shoulders, but fortunately none of it went into either of his eyes. He was of course terribly scalded, and Dr. Graham, who was in attendance upon him as quickly as possible, at first feared the accident would prove fatal; but on Wednesday he said he had hopes of the poor little patient's recovery, though at that time he was not out of danger.

HE LOOKS INTO THE EYE.

Canada's greatest eyesight specialist and optician, Mr. Wm. B. Montgomery, of Toronto, is now in Lindsay, delivering a course of lectures in optical science to Mr. C. Hughan, the well-known jeweller. While this specialist is in Lindsay he is doing a wonderful work for the public. He conducts daily free examinations of the eyes, and prescribes glasses for all eyesight errors. Hundreds have been to see him.
