Treatment For Cowpox.
Cowpox (variola vaccine) is the same disease which is utilized on a large scale for the purpose of securing vaccine matter for the purpose of protecting human beings from smallpox. The disease is not at all serious, and usually requires very little treatment. If the teats or udder is very sore it would be best to use a milking tube for drawing the milk. At any rate, the vesicles or little blisters should not be broken. If the cow has much fever she should have one pound of epsom salts and an ounce of ground ginger, dissolved in half a gallon of cold water, as a drench. After the physic has operated, give one-half ounce of saltpetre twice daily in the drinking water for three or four days. If the udder is swollen and hot bathe it with hot water for half an hour three times daily, and after each bath use a little of the following: One ounce sugar of lead, one quart of water. If there is no fever and no swelling, only the eruption on the teats, no treatment is required. The disease usually runs its course in about two weeks, if not irritated.—Atlanta Constitution.

General Purpose Hogs.
If the purpose of the hog is to produce the largest amount of flesh in the shortest period of time on the consumption of the smallest amount of food—and certainly that is the commercial purpose—the Berkshire is the equal, if not the superior, of any other breed, writes C. E. Stahl in Farm Home. The breeders of the very large species of swine do not claim for their hogs that they mature quickly, although they attain great size; the fanciers of the smaller varieties do claim early maturity, but frequently their animals do not go to sufficient weight. The medium Berkshire and the Poland-China seem, therefore, to be the two species especially adapted to general use. But of these two the Berkshire is the more alert and active and having these qualifications is apt to be the more healthy. He is, we think, the better ringer and pasture feeder of the two—a very important factor in the production of cheap pork.

Feeding the Horse.
The horse needs a variety of grains, just as his owner needs a variety of feed. A diet suggested by a practical and successful farmer is: "A ration mixed in the proportion of fifty pounds of oats, fifty pounds of corn and twenty-five pounds of bran will always be relished by the work horse, and it will be found infinitely better adapted to his needs than straight corn. Nor is it so very much more expensive either at the present prices. The average farm horse will eat from fifteen to twenty pounds a day of this mixture."

The Stable Doorway.
Many farm horse stables have doorways that are too narrow for large horses to pass through safely. It is a trick with many horses to rush through a narrow doorway quickly. They have had experience in getting knocked from one side or the other, and they want the ordeal over with as soon as possible. The narrow doorway may cause the most valuable horses to injure a hip. It costs but little usually to move a post and put in a wider door.

Look to the Chicks.
If the chicks are not doing well examine them for lice. This is the most common ailment of the young chicks.

NEWSPAPER LAW.

1. A post-master is required to give notice by letter (returning the paper does not answer the law), when a subscriber does not take his paper out of the office, and state the reasons for its not being taken. Any neglect to do so makes the postmaster responsible to the publisher for payment.
2. If any person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount whether the paper is taken from the office or not. There can be no legal discontinuance until the payment is made.
3. Any person who takes a paper from the post-office, whether directed to his name or another, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for the pay.
4. If a subscriber orders his paper to be stopped at a certain time and the publisher continues to send it, the subscriber is bound to pay for it if he takes it from the post-office. This proceeds upon the ground that a man must pay for what he uses.
5. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post-office, or removing and leaving them uncalled for, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.
