

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

Considering how cheap they are, compliments saw an immense amount of wood.

It is just barely possible that the woman who wouldn't marry the best man on earth has never been asked to leave her happy home for him.

Some people are honest because it is troublesome to be otherwise.

If poverty is a blessing in disguise, the disguise is so perfect that you would never suspect it.

Never judge a man by his clothes. He may have another suit at home, but the chances are, of course, that he hasn't.

One trade that follows the flag is naturally the fighting trade.

It makes the man who is afraid he will yield to temptation sore if none is thrown in his way.

The man who invented the fountain pen has just died, but the fellows who invent words to fit the occasion when it won't work are still with us.

When a girl is about sixteen, she thinks the reason all men do not work at soda fountains is because they cannot get the jobs.

It is a thrilling and joyous sight to see a dignified man who is some pumpkins at home trying to push his way through the crowds in a strange city.

Sometimes a man does not see an opportunity that almost bumps into him because a pretty girl is passing on the other side of the street.

After a man has learned the ways of the world it doesn't increase his opinion of the world to any alarming extent.

All In the Business.

The drummer in the country town Speaks highly of the little place. He thinks that when he settles down And quits the high, nerve killing pace That he will take his child and wife And settle with them in the woods— In fact, he one of them for life, Because he wants to sell them goods.

He thinks their water is the best That he has tasted anywhere, And he has traveled east and west And knows the finest draft is there. He doesn't drink it to excess If amber fluid is not shy, But he is willing to express Opinions that will make them buy.

The girls, he thinks, are far more fair Than in the next jerkwater town; The men are handsome, true and square; The scenery should bring renown; The town a future great will find, Has prospects, any one could tell, Forgetting not to keep in mind That he is there with goods to sell.

When he goes home he says, alas, That life is dull and commonplace Out in the tall and uncut grass. He doesn't say it to their face— Oh, no; he lies with might and main To make the business come his way, While longing for a friendly train So he can make his get-away.

Saw Her First.

"She never kissed a man in her life." "She doesn't know what she has missed." "Possibly, but the men know what they haven't."

Knew the Marks.

"The girls cannot fool him in regard to their ages." "No?" "He is on to all of the latest wrinkles."

So Simple.

It is easy enough if you're going somewhere To juggle the railroads out of a fare; You can beat them for money, marbles or chalk. Would you know how to do the trick? Well, walk.

Acrobatic Feat.

"He thinks he is eligible to membership in the turners' society." "On what grounds?" "He always turns his cuffs."

Wins the Jobs.

"She is fitting herself for a position to apply for a job as typewriter." "Patronizing a shorthand school?" "No, a beauty doctor."

NEWSPAPER LAW.

1. A post-master is required to give notice by letter (returning the paper does not answer the law), when a subscriber does not take his paper out of the office, and state the reasons for its not being taken. Any neglect to do so makes the postmaster responsible to the publisher for payment.
2. If any person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount whether the paper is taken from the office or not. There can be no legal discontinuance until the payment is made.
3. Any person who takes a paper from the post-office, whether directed to his name or another, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for the pay.
4. If a subscriber orders his paper to be stopped at a certain time and the publisher continues to send it, the subscriber is bound to pay for it if he takes it from the post-office. This proceeds upon the ground that a man must pay for what he uses.
5. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post-office, or removing and leaving them uncalled for, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.
