

Dairy Wisdom In Brief.

Every dairy utensil should be kept as scrupulously clean now as in the hottest weather.

None but the best cows should get the good feed. Of course you don't have poor feed, therefore you should have none but the best cows.

Do not allow the cream to freeze. As a rule, churning is put off too long in winter, and this is the cause of lots of trouble.

Beautiful cows are not those that appear best on canvas in pictures, but on the balance sheet in dollars and cents.

Stop and think how many steps you might save yourself by having a place for each dairy utensil and keeping it there. Try it a few days and you never will go back to the old way.

The calf should have whole milk the first two weeks of its life. Then begin reducing the quantity of whole milk and add a little shorts or oilmeal. When five or six weeks old it should be subsisting wholly on skim milk, shorts and hay.

Cold may cause a big appetite, but if the food is all used in fighting the cold there will be very little left to increase the milk flow. Just take notice.

There is a big difference between a cold and a warm stable. One means comfort and profit, and the other means loss.

Promote the cows that do not come up to the average yield of the herd. Give them a walk off the farm. Replace them with cows that can and do keep above the average yield.

Cows that are compelled to wade in mud and manure half knee deep, sleep under the open sky and eat corn and prairie hay cannot be expected to produce much milk. Cows must be well fed if they give any considerable quantity of milk.

Very rich cream is quit apt to paste or thicken in the churn, so that the concussion ceases. This can usually be corrected by adding enough water at the same temperature as the cream to dilute it so it will drop.

Most cows begin to fail in their milk about three months after calving. Careful feeding and persistent milking is the only way to overcome this tendency. A cow once allowed to fail in her milk is very hard to get back to the normal yield.

NEWSPAPER LAW.

1. A post-master is required to give notice by letter (returning the paper does not answer the law), when a subscriber does not take his paper out of the office, and state the reasons for its not being taken. Any neglect to do so makes the postmaster responsible to the publisher for payment.
2. If any person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrears, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount whether the paper is taken from the office or not. There can be no legal discontinuance until the payment is made.
3. Any person who takes a paper from the post-office, whether directed to his name or another, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for the pay.
4. If a subscriber orders his paper to be stopped at a certain time and the publisher continues to send it, the subscriber is bound to pay for it if he takes it from the post-office. This proceeds upon the ground that a man must pay for what he uses.
5. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post-office, or removing and leaving them uncollected for, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.
