Ruinous Waste of Capitalism.

The controlling spirit of the capitalist system is to convert everything into profit. We say everything advisedly. Profit is the god of capitalist idolatry. All else is secondary. The capitalist eye is so trained that it sees no majesty in a green-crowned monarch of the forest, but only so many feet of lumber, no beauty in a field of perfumed clover or waving grain, only so many bushels of yield; that is to say, in the final analysis, so many dollars, or, as Shakespeare puts it, so much "vile trash" to complete the process of mental degeneracy and moral death.

The pursuit of profit not only hardens the heart and softens the brain, but it is utterly destructive of ideals. The victim lives wholly in the present, if he can be said to live at all; and so completely absorbed is he in his quest, that he is as oblivious of the great universe and its myriad wonders as is the pestiferous mosquito that fattens upon the blood it drains from its hapless victims.

As late as 1876 the western plains were still covered with buffalo, the number being estimated at six million head.
It was about this time the ruthless slaughter began, and within a few years the bison, king of the plains and noblest of American game animals, were practically exterminated. Under the dominion of nature and the red man the buffalo would have abided forever and furnished food and raiment for all future generations; but, like the trees of the forest, he had to succumb to the ravages of capitalism, and thus are we made to behold the difference between savagery and civilization.

The great forests are now being depleted to gorge the maw of capitalism with profit. With the ferocity of a cyclone the noblest groves are attacked, the finest trees cut down and twice the number destroyed; and when the heart of the forest has been cut out, fire completes the work of ruin and devastation.
In this frenzy to extort immediate profit and swift returns, there is absolutely no thought for the future. The exploiters who strip the earth naked to glut their passion for profit do not dream that they are robbing future generations, and, in fact, so far as their ravenous spirit prevails, murdering their own offspring.

The wanton waste of capitalism defies all attempts at computation. In the name of production it destroys the sources from which it draws its substance, and in the name of economy it practises the most reckless and criminal waste.
To glut its own abnormal appetite is capitalism's first and last concern, and when some extraordinary protest penetrates its pachyderm, its bacchanal resort is "after me the deluge."

The earth was wisely made to yield its harvests in rich abundance for all time and for all the children of men.
But capitalism, now at the high-water mark of its power, has laid violent hands upon Mother Nature, and therefore Socialism has come to the rescue, and in good time the vandal hords will be put to flight, and the glad earth given over to all the sons and daughters of man.

—Appeal to Reason.

The Reason Why.

There is an interesting and suggestive editorial in Forestry and Irrigation for September, under the heading of "A Norway Town Without Taxes," from which we quote the opening paragraph, as follows:

"The town of Faleide, Norway, imposes no taxes on its lucky inhabitants," says the London, Eng., Bystander. "During the last thirty years the authorities at Faleide have sold over $5,000,000 worth of trees, and by judicious replanting, have provided for a similar income every thirty years. In consequence of this source of commercial wealth, there are no taxes in Faleide, and local railways and telephones are free as well as education—and drinks, on the king's birthday!"

Commenting upon the foregoing the editor very aptly says:

"How Utopian the suggestion, at first blush, of a 'town without taxes!' Yet the explanation is simple. Instead of permitting all its forest lands to become private property, to be cut over, burned over, and converted into a desert, this town has simply retained an area for its own use, and has administered the forest therein in accordance with forestry principles. In consequence the community enjoys a permanent income from a permanent estate, an income, furthermore, sufficiently large to render taxation unnecessary."

This is a clear and unanswerable reasoning so far as it goes. It is the application of common sense to an economic proposition, and nothing more is required. Not a whit less practical is the application of the same principle to the whole realm of economic activities.

The simple question is, which is preferable, the private ownership of the earth and the monstrous perversion of nature for personal gain, or collective ownership for the equal benefit and happiness of all?

The paragraph above quoted from a capitalist publication is immensely suggestive. There is food for thought in it for the many who are looking half-heartedly toward Socialism, while still supporting the criminal misrule of the capitalist class.

Quite pertinent and logical is the question propounded by the editor farther along in the same article. "But why," he asks, "should the idea of public property, publicly owned and administered for the public benefit, appear so unusual and surprising?"

Why, indeed! Simply because the capitalist press and pulpit, its politicians and educators and all its other countless influences are in alliance to keep the people in ignorance of the truths of Socialism and the crimes of capitalism.

But in spite of all these powerful agencies of darkness, the people are awakening, the light is breaking, and the day of deliverance draweth nigh.—Ibid.

Killing Children for Profits.

Mrs. Ella Roeve Bloor, of Philadelphia, writer and lecturer on industrial topics, who is investigating child labor conditions in the factories of western Pennsylvania, declares that hundreds of little children under the legal age are employed in a chimney factory at Charleroi, Pa.

"An army of little girls came flocking from all directions to the factories this morning," said Mrs. Bloor. "They work from 7 a. m. until 6 p. m., when little boys take their places and work until 2 a. m. The little fellows are afraid to go home at that hour, and many boys of 10 and 11 years carry revolvers to and from their work. I believe the condition of child labor in Pennsylvania is as bad as it is in the south."

To show you how the glass manufacturers disobey the law, I will state that I have secured 6,300 convictions in six years of my office. One large factory, covering 640 acres in Alton, Ill., has two gates for inspectors to get in and lots of holes for kids to get out.—Elyse T. Davies, Chief Factory Inspector of Illinois.

Capitalists know that Socialism will be successful if inaugurated, and show it by their actions. Socialism would not prohibit private business enterprises, but the capitalists realize that it would beat them out in open competition. That is why they hate and fight it.
