NEWSPAPER LAW.

1. A post-master is required to give notice by letter (returning the paper does not answer the law), when a subscriber does not take his paper out of the office, and state the reasons for its not being taken. Any neglect to do so makes the postmaster responsible to the publisher for payment.
2. If any person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrears, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount whether the paper is taken from the office or not. There can be no legal discontinuance until the payment is made.
3. Any person who takes a paper from the post-office, whether directed to his name or another, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for the pay.
4. If a subscriber orders his paper to be stopped at a certain time and the publisher continues to send it, the subscriber is bound to pay for it he takes it from the post-office. This proceeds upon the ground that a man must pay for what he uses.
5. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post-office, or removing and leaving them uncollected for, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

SWEENEY IN HORSES.

Cause of This Condition and Treatment of the Disease.

Nothing is more distressful to see or lays a heavier burden of criticism upon the farmer than the sight of an otherwise sound and well formed horse ruined with sweeney, says the Missouri and Kansas Farmer. If the causes of this condition were better understood we have a feeling that farmers would have fewer animals thus affected. On many farms during the winter the horses do little or no work. When spring comes and before the muscles are toned up the heavy work of plowing or disking is begun. The draft may not be exceedingly heavy, but it is steady and unrelenting, and the muscles of the shoulders soon become tired. Then the horse in order to relieve himself twists his head to one side and pulls with one shoulder for a time. In a little while the nerves of this shoulder become so compressed and benumbed that paralysis ensues. The nerves then are unable to control the nutrition of the muscles, and they waste away. This is sweeney.

Sometimes drivers of horses are careless in the way the cross lines are adjusted, so that the head of the horse is pulled to the side, bringing the most of the strain upon one of the shoulders. Then, again, sometimes there is no link between the singletree and the whiffletree, so that the inner end of the former rests upon the latter the moment one of the horses drops a little behind, and the entire load is borne by the outside tug. Horses until they get used to work should be frequently rested. If you think their shoulders do not become tired just because the draft is light put a five pound weight on your shoulder and walk a mile. You would think nothing of carrying a two bushel bag of corn a rod or two, but you soon begin to think it is a dreadful task to carry a five pound weight even a quarter of a mile. Rest the horses often until their muscles become hardened. Just a word about the treatment of sweeney. Since it is merely nerve paralysis which lies at the base of the disease, it is worse than cruel to put in rowels and setons. Rub the muscles and excite them with liniment. Use the horse with a breast collar at some light work. The disease is very difficult to cure, but it generally can be mitigated.

Dipping Swine.

On each and every farm there should be some provision made for dipping swine. This not only proves to be an easy and effectual method of disinfecting animals which are being brought upon the farm, but it also furnishes a good way for disposing of lice. Every swine herd should be dipped at least twice a year, in the spring and in the fall. There are very few herds of swine that are not affected at some time or other with lice. Some recommend sprinkling or spraying for lice. This is not a very good way to overcome the difficulty, as the lice are usually found on the head close to the ears, under the armpits and in other secluded places where spraying could not in any way reach them. Swine thus affected, when put through a dipping tank, will be free from all trouble.—W. J. Kennedy.

Loss in Sheep Raising.

The cause of loss in sheep raising may be summed up as follows: First, low condition of the flock at mating time; second, insufficient food and shelter during winter; third, neglect during lambing time; fourth, worrying by dogs; fifth, selling the best lambs and keeping the culls; sixth, using inferior rams, and, seventh, neglecting to destroy the ticks.—W. S. Fraser.

THE SWINEHERD.

The sow that eats her pigs is improperly fed. Such appetites are always unnatural. Turn out the breeding sows and pigs, but remember that when sows with older pigs are turned with younger ones the big ones will rob the little fellows.

Don't keep your little pigs shut up. They will thrive much better if you fence off a nice clover field for them. Give them liberty and plenty of milk. It will not pay to keep the breeding stock with the market hogs. They need different care.

You need not concern yourself about warm quarters at present. What the hogs need now is shade.

It is the sow that is five or six years old that makes the best mother. Those that are too young are not the best ones.

When two litters a year are raised: wean the pigs when they are from six to eight weeks old. When only one litter is raised they may remain with the sow a little longer, but should never be allowed to pull her down too much in flesh.

Pigs like and need green feed. If they have no pasture you will have to cut soiling crops for them.

Barley is said to be valuable as pig feed, but it's not as good as corn.

Be sure to cut, while green, some clover hay for the hogs to eat during the winter.
