The Humor of It.

We are such delightfully stupid little folk. We have n't the sense of humor of an owl. The best-selling jokebook of some future age will be the historical record of the serious doings of this age. Imagine the people of a few centuries hence reading how we overworked our publicity department telling folks how highly civilized we were, meanwhile spending one penny for public education against 25 for perfecting machinery to kill each oth er with. Or, fancy the loud "ha-ha that will some day greet the account of the southern planters of 1908, who were forced to cheat nature and turn under a portion of her bountiful crop of cotton in order to keep up the price of cotton, or the fruit jobbers of California, for instance, who dumped a shipload of bananas into the sea to maintain market prices, while ragged men sneaked along the gutters picking up banana peelings and eating them with relish. Verily, our vaunted civilization needs a brisk curry-combing, for it "sho' is" shaggy in spots.

We live in a thinking age, and yet we talk earnestly and with much godliness about "humane bullets" and civilized warfare, as if there could be such things. A humane bullet is one that kills you without inflicting any unnecessary injury upon itself. It just the temptation. And so we call the wise men of our civilized nations together to decide for just how "dead we may kill one another, and what kind of bullets to use without disregarding the international courtesies of the benevolent game of warfare.

We fully believe we are living in a thinking age. We are so sure of it, in fact, that if anybody doubts it, we fine day, when we really do begin to think, we are all-everyone of us, from the millionaire to the paupergoing to see the absurdity of our position. We are going to see, for instance, that instead of urging parents to have more children, we should take better care of the children that they means to increase the prospect of trou- the spiritual and develop the ideal.

>00 >00 og | ble, and that the "biggest navy" idea is not only absurd (so long a: there is a dollar left in any nation's tre sury); but it is also very burdensome to taxpayers. We are going to see the inconsistency of our talk about "overproduction "of the necessaries of life when anyone is in need, and that a big wheat crop and a long bread line are not compatible with civilization.

When this big truth comes home at last to human society, it will come home to all classes of human society. Doctor, lawyer, merchant and laborer will grasp it together. We are all brothers in the last analysis, and we all have our hearts in the right place. The only thing is that up to the prosent time we have all been just a lit V too busy making a living to stop long enough to think about it. In other words, we are not yet living in a "thinking" age, though we have somehow fallen victims to the comical hallucination that we are. Funny, isn't it? -The Vehicle Dealer, Pennsylvania.

Why You Are Poor.

No matter what you may think about where you came from, why you are here or whither you are going, you are here and under the necessity of providing for your comfort and those dear to you or dependent upon you. Here you are, in a world full of natural resources that possess the property of feeding, clothing and sheltering you when you fashion them to that purpose by means of your labor. But certain artificial as well as unsatisfactory relations have arisen between you and other fellow travellers through this weary world. One fellow worm in human form has fenced off a part of the earth from you, and insists that you divide up what you produce in tilling that land and give him part of it as rent. Another has by certain processes obtained ownership and consequent control of the machinery you must use in order to make shoes, coats, hats and other apparel. At every turn there is a man between the propertyless worker and the things he would and must use; and this man in every instance exacts a tribute from such as he gives opportunity to use what he calls his. As a result of the so-called civilization that has developed undersuch conditions, there are occasional periods of industrial depression or panics, when the man who claims there natural resources is unwilling to let you use them, because unable to do so with any profit to himself. If moneyless, you are as effectively shut off from the earth as though adrift in space, with a wire fence between. It is a condition, not a theory, that confronts the workingman. If he is to cultivate the earth and make the most of himself he is under the neceshates to see you die, but can't resist sity of removing the man between, who, instead of being necessary to his happiness and welfare, is in fact the author of his disemployment and want and misery. There must be a re-arrangement of human relations, so that all may have access to the means of production, and that each may do his share in shaping natural resources for the use of mankind. To achieve this is the purpose of Socialism and the somake it pretty hot for him. But some cialist movement. A calm and dispassionate view of the problems that confront the race makes it plain that the only solution is to be found in this great working-class movement.-Appeal to Reason.

The truest friend of religion in the already have. We are going to see world is Socialism, because it will give that to increase armies and navies men time, if they choose, to cultivate
