Survival of the Fittest.

No, Socialism will not prevent the survival of the fittest.

Capitalism prevents the survival of the best.

Socialism will abolish the survival of the slickest.

Socialism will provide conditions where the best will have a chance to survive. The best are now killed off, or submerged.

There never has been a time since the dawn of civilization when the best men have survived. That is, when the best men have been accorded their proper place among their fellow men.

The best men are men of moral integrity, of intellectual vigor, the broad-minded and big-hearted men, the men who do something useful, the men who love their fellow men, the men who do good in the world, the men who are of the best use of humanity.

These are the best men.

But the conditions since civilization began have not been such that they could survive.

The fittest do survive.

That is, the men who are fittest for the environment. The men who are nearest adapted to existing conditions.

Throw wheat in a weed patch and the weeds will survive, although the wheat is the best.

The weeds are the fittest for those conditions.

Put a man naked-handed against a hyena and the hyena will survive, although the man is the best.

In the middle ages the man who was the most expert with the sword and the lance was the one who survived, although no one would contend that he was the best.

He was the fittest for the conditions of a social system in which might ruled and physical prowess was the deciding factor.

At the present time the narrow-minded men, the men who have turned their hearts to stone, who have turned their hearts to pity and sympathy, who never have an unselfish thought, who never do anything useful, who deny themselves all the expanding culture and ennobling associations of life, who spend every minute of their waking hours in a selfish, brutal, fiendish, savage, cruel, merciless, ghoulish conflict for financial supremacy, are the men who survive, although no intelligent man will contend for a moment that they are the best men.

They are the fittest for the conditions of a social system in which the possession of money and property is considered success, and in which it is necessary for one to lay aside his higher qualities and make use of the inferior qualities of cunning and craftiness in order to achieve that so-called success.

In the Socialist commonwealth the men who are the most useful to the human race, in the trades, professions, in the management of affairs, in the arts, in the sciences, in literature, in everything that is good, will survive.

They will survive because they will be the fittest for the conditions of a social system in which it will be necessary to use the best and noblest qualities of human nature in order to succeed.

They will be the fittest and also the best.

For the first time since the dawn of civilization the best will survive.

Today the men who survive are not only not the best men, but they can survive only by bringing wreck and ruin upon their fellow men, destroying their hopes and blighting their lives.

In the Socialist commonwealth the men who survive can only survive by making the lot of their fellows happier and better.

They can only elevate themselves by elevating all humanity.

Years ago a reckless young adventurer went to California. He found a rich gold mine. Although the gold did not belong to him, the law allowed him to take it because he happened to find it. He became worth more than a hundred million dollars. He invested this money in such a manner that it constantly brought into his purse still other money that did not belong to him, and which was sorely needed by those to whom it did belong. The newspapers called him successful and said he was a great commercial genius. He bought a foreign snob for his daughter and lived abroad a great deal himself. He died and was lauded to the skies. You would have thought he was a great man instead of a mere lucky adventurer. His name was John W. Mackey.

Once upon a time a boy was born who seemed to possess a perfect passion for music. When a mere child he exhibited musical talent which astonished his friends and put older musicians to shame. He was afflicted with extreme poverty. He struggled manfully and devoted his whole soul to his passion. The result was a series of musical productions which have ever since held the musical world entranced. He struggled on in poverty. His whole life was embittered and filled with suffering by his poverty. At the age of thirty-five he died—of starvation. He was buried in a pauper's grave. His name was Mozart.

Mozart was one of the best men. But John W. Mackey was one of the fittest for the existing conditions. Therefore Mackey survived. In the Socialist commonwealth the best will also be the fittest.—John M. Work.
