Your Morning Beverage

We mean COFFEE, of course.

Not any coffee, but a pure blend, that is appetizing, stimulating and healthful.

We have the identical article.

We have heard many good things said of our coffees. Said, too, by housekeepers who have gone the rounds, and who came back to stay.

Then we know at least a little bit about coffees ourselves. Have learned from that best of all teachers, experience.

And putting what we have often been told together with what we have learned we ask lovers of a good cup of coffee to trust us to supply them.

Historic Utterances of Great Men.

"The public be damned! I'm not running this road for the benefit of the public. I'm running it for my own benefit."—Cornelius Vanderbilt, of the New York Central Railway.

"The damned fools don't know what is good for them."—J. Pierpont Morgan, speaking of the striking steel workers in September, 1901.

"The rights and interests of the laboring man will be protected and cared for, not by labor agitators, but by the Christian men to whom God in His infinite wisdom has given control of the property interests of the country."—Geo. M. Baer, mine owner, during the coal strike of 1902.

"I see no solution for the problem until hunger compels capitulation."—Charles L. Eidlitz, President of New York Building Trades Employers' Association, during the lock-out in July, 1903.

"To hell with the Constitution."—Major McClelland, commanding the state militia (paid by the Mine Owners' Association) during the Colorado miners' strike and lock-out of 1904.

"Habeas Corpus be damned!—We'll give them post mortems instead."—Adjutant-General Sherman Bell of the Colorado militia, defying the orders of the civil courts.

"What's the Constitution between friends?"—Timothy Cambell, of Tammany Hall.

"I'm working for my own pocket all the time."—Richard Croker, of Tammany Hall, under whose regime Schmittberger became a power in the police.

"Men who object to what they call 'government by injunction' are in hearty sympathy with their remote skin-clad ancestors who lived in caves, fought one another with stone-headed axes and ate the mammoth and woolly rhinoceros. * * * They are not in sympathy with men of good minds and good civic morality."—Theodore Roosevelt.

"God knows; I do n't."—William H. Taft, at Cooper Union, February, 1908, when asked, "What can be done to give men work in hard times?"

"Strike! They (the American workmen) have no jobs now. We do not want to take up work again now. So what can they do? They will have to submit or they will starve."—J. Pierpont Morgan, February, 1908.

"The Club is mightier than the Constitution."—Inspector Schmittberger, of the New York police, during the riot in Union Square on March 28th, 1908.

Under Socialism you would not seek employment from another, because you would be able to employ yourself.

Child's Play.

"Would it not solve the problem of the hard times and the unemployed if all the hungry and idle in the cities would go out in the country and farm, or buy a piece of land on the installment plan? I know a few people who had not a cent of money, who are getting rich by going out in Oklahoma and Dakota. The removal of these from the cities would help to increase wages there."—C. C.

This plan has been tried. It was the remedy of the Salvation Army, and, after years of work along this line, England has more unemployed than ever before. The farmers themselves are just now doing precious little more than making a living, and how is a man without a cent and with a family needing something for supper, to go a thousand miles away and support his family in the meantime; and then, when he arrives as a tramp, keep from being run in as a vagrant until he can get cash or credit with which to buy a farm? How would you like to try it, neighbor? Suppose, however, he could do this (and not one in ten thousand could), then he would help to reduce the price of farm products by just so much more production, until the farmers became dependents; and, at the same time, more unemployed would have to be created or imported in order to keep wages from going too high. You cannot escape the proposition that the wages and profit systems are merely ways of stealing from the producer, and that there is no way to get rid of the results of that theft (which are disemployment and poverty) until you end the theft in an honest social system that will give to each worker his full social product.—Appeal to Reason.

Socialism or Shipwreck.

Modern society cannot escape shipwreck unless it reorganize itself into a co-operative commonwealth. The establishment of the co-operative commonwealth implies a social revolution; it implies the overthrow of the capitalist system of production that has become a drag on all further development and an incubus upon the common weal; it means the placing of the machinery of production now held and owned by landlords and capitalists, into the hands of the whole people; in other words, it implies the downfall of the system of private ownership in the implements of labor—land and capital, i. e., machines, tools etc.—and the substitution of public, common, collective ownership, to be operated for use and not for private profit.—Karl Kautsky.

If you had opportunity, it would be an easy thing to make a living. Socialism means opportunity.
