That's what a person will say about a pair of shoes that have been satisfactory in every way—when they are laid aside for the last time. Worn out, but they earned their cost. No longer of any use, but they've been reliable, trustworthp, dependable, every minute since I bought them.

That is something that we try to have true of every shoe that we sell. To please us it must please you. To please you it must earn its cost by giving proper service.

We would be glad to have you look at our special line of Women's Dongola Blucher Bal. at $2.00, an honest make, stylish shape, and solid from the Top of the Tops to the Bottom of the Bottoms.

Food for Thought.

Socialism, while destroying individualism, would develop the individuality of each man or woman to an extent never before reached in any civilization. This would be brought about by having the opportunity of choosing an occupation within the reach of each person. When every one can follow the vocation he likes best, he will develop in that line more than he could in any other. Now, people have to follow any vocation that offers—not what they would prefer.

"Labor is free," says the subsidized press. Yes, labor is free to fight the battles, pay the taxes and produce the wealth. Labor is free to pay the trust prices for food, pay tribute to Shylock and beg for leave to toil. Labor is free to work for what it can get, live in over-crowded tenement houses in back alleys, and vote the monopoly ticket or be discharged. Labor is free to work out fines under vagrancy laws, sleep in jails and live on bread and water. Labor is free to starve, free to die, and free to fill a place in the potter's field. What glorious freedom!

And yet without workers—"laborers"—there could be no nation, no wealth, no society—no anything; but without the "officials," all things but their vices could and would be. When one stops to think that ninety men out of every hundred belong to the class of "workers," and that they hold members of this class in such neglect that the killing of two or three is not deserving of so much as knowing their names, one has but to wonder that workers are as well off as they are.

In the struggle which this system forces most men to chase the almighty dollar, they lose sight of the fact that labor misapplied is labor lost. That is, that when four men are set to do a thing that one could do equally well in the same time, the labor of three men is wasted. So when they permit a system that forces on them fifteen stores, when one could sell them all the goods to better advantage, they pay for the keeping of the fourteen and get no benefit from them. The one store could take no advantage of a monopoly if it were conducted on the same plan as the post-office.

Is there a way to deal effectually with the trusts and stop their march upon the wealth of the people? There is, and it is the only way for the merchants to get satisfaction, for they are bound to be forced out of business for themselves. All stores (or departments of distribution) must be national, and operated on a plan similar to the postal. No man or set of men has a natural right to control any public utility; but the present competitive system gives him or them that right. Merchants may kick and howl until doomsday, but the cobwebs will finally grow over their doors, because the department store has come to stay. It is an institution that is going to do the business; capital will do it.

It is the policy of the ruling classes all over the world to arm to the teeth to preserve peace. The masses of all nations are taxed to employ soldiers, militia and sheriffs—to arm, to clothe and to feed them. But if some laboring man should be guilty of the heinous crime of having a weapon on him, unless acting under these rulers' orders, he is arrested and put behind the bars of a prison, or chained on a rockpile, for his audacity in doing what the rulers show by their example is the proper thing to do. I am glad of it. If the poor people in this country, where a ballot is placed in their hands, have not enough sense to use that ballot intelligently, to make their condition equal to that of the ruling classes, they have not the intelligence to use fire-arms. The ways of right are ways of peace. The ballot is the way of peace—more potent than the armament of any tyrant.—B. Ashby.

Pikers and Pirates.

A piker in Pennsylvania robbed an express car of a few hundred dollars. Thirty minutes after the theft was reported all the police and detectives of the country were on the trail.

Harriman, with the connivance of Roosevelt, robbed the Alton railway of $62,500,000. Thieves stole the gas plant at Philadelphia, the customhouse at New York, the lake front and streets of Chicago, the forests of Idaho, Oregon and Washington, the waterways of half the western states, thousands of acres of government coal lands, the franchise of hundreds of thousands of American citizens, and yet not even a one-eyed constable, with a scurvy cur at his heels, was put on the trail of the pirates.

The clumsy work of this Pennsylvania piker merits the severest punishment. A man who would stoop to a petty theft when there are many millions in sight, thereby putting the constabulary of the nation on his track, is foolish enough to be under the eye of a watchful guardian or incarcerated in a feeble-minded institute.

Moral: Scorn to be a piker. If you must be a thief, adopt the methods of capitalist pirates and elude the blood hounds of the law.—App'l to Reason.

How can a man grow rich except on the spoils of other men's labor?—Froude, the historian.

According to Webster, justice means the rendering to every man his due. There can be no justice until the profit system ends, and to every man is rendered the full product of his labor.
