Infantile mortality results from no other reason than the fact that bad conditions, bad food, unhealthy quarters and surroundings exist. They exist because the working class are exploited and robbed by the possessors of the means of life. Were a condition existent where the producers owned their products, the bountifulness of nature would secure to all members of society a sufficient quantity of the necessaries of life. It is the absolute lack of such a condition that produces the infant mortality so rampant to-day. It is not by tinkering with legislative enactments in the way of "Feeding of Children" or "State Maintenance," but by the control by Government of the whole means of production and distribution that anything can be done. > The capitalist class will see to it that if these deaths among the children have a tendency to lower their profits they'll attend to it. They'll feed the kids; they'll feed the women; they'll feed everything and anything so long as it is consistent with their interests. So be not deluded with the specious effort of the capitalist agents. It is not the reform of conditions that concerns the Socialist. That is the work of the capitalists who see the necessity of acting to side track any possible depletion of their profits. So they cause an investigation to be held. We peruse it, and wonder how long the workers are going to be fooled by the capitalists .- M. Baritz, in Western Clarion
