

YOUNG FOLKS

PRECIOUS STONES.

"At length the little princess wandered into a beautiful garden. Fountains showered pearls and sapphires into basins of the purest silver, and golden birds, flitting among the trees, brought huge diamonds, rubies and amethysts for her to play with."

Marion frowned and closed the fairy-tale book with a snap.

"O dear," she sighed, "I wish I could be a princess in a fairy-tale for once, and have rubies and diamonds to play with, and gather gold by the pailful as the Princess Irene did!" and curling up on the sofa, she gazed disconsolately into the fireplace.

Aunt Grace stopped sewing and looked at her little niece; then smiling, she turned and looked out through the window. The lawn was velvety in the warm sunshine and ablaze with flowers. Out beyond, the yellow cornfields rippled in the wind, and through the violet marshlands the river curved and glittered.

"You can gather jewels far greater and more wonderful than those the little princess played with," said Aunt Grace, pushing the window up, "and you can walk on gold if you wish to, Marion."

Marion uncurred and sat up, her dark eyes wide with astonishment.

"You cannot find them by frowning into a sooty fireplace," said Aunt Grace. "We must hunt for them; we may find the princess, too—who knows!" And laughing gaily, she began to fold her sewing.

The frown disappeared from Marion's face, and jumping up, she followed her aunt across the piazza and out on the green lawn.

"What jewel shall we look for first, and what color is it, Marion?"

"Rubies," said Marion, growing interested, "and they are red, a deep, beautiful red, and pearls are—"

"Hold on," said Aunt Grace; "one at a time, please. See! I have found rubies, gorgeous ones." And she stood with her eyes shaded, looking toward the south end of the garden.

"Where? I don't see any," said Marion, in a doubting tone.

"Look hard and you'll see them glowing and nodding in the sun."

"Oh, the roses!" cried Marion. "You mean flowers, don't you, aunty?"

"Yes, dear, I think the beautiful, fragrant, living flowers are the rarest gems of all. We will call them God's jewels. Just see how He has studded our garden with them!"

They had reached the roses by this time, and Marion, with eyes glowing, stooped and broke one off, smoothing its satiny petals with the tips of her fingers. She loved beautiful things, and this thought, that the flowers were God's jewels, was new and wonderful.

"See the blue forget-me-nots, Aunt Grace; they are turquoise, and the white pansies are pearls, and the purple are big amethysts. The asters must be topazes. Oh, how rich we are! Much richer than the Princess Irene, for our jewels are fragrant and growing, and in each jewel are the seeds of a hundred more jewels. Uncle Ed cut one open once, and showed them to me."

Suddenly she remembered the gold.

"But, Aunt Grace, where is the gold?" she asked.

Slipping her arms round the little girl, Aunt Grace turned her round until she faced the cornfields.

"Look, dear, and you'll see it rippling and sifting through everywhere."

"Oh, I see it! I see it, aunty!" cried Marion, jumping up and down. "It's the sunshine! God's gold, and it gilds everything—the fields, trees, and even the rocks. See! The dandelions on the lawn are junks of gold!"

Aunt Grace was brushing her hair back from her face, and the diamond upon her finger glittered in the sun.

"Aunty," said Marion, soberly, "we can't find any diamonds, and they are prettiest of all."

Aunt Grace turned and pointed down to the river, shimmering and flashing in the sunlight.

"See them, Marion!" she cried. "See them sparkle! Thousands upon thousands, each one set in silver and it looks as though we were going down to them," she added, as Uncle Ed came up from the barn with two long, slim oars on his shoulder.

Marion gazed at the river with a new wonder in her heart.

"I never noticed it was so beautiful before," she murmured. "There's something beautiful everywhere!"

"The fairy-tale has all come true, Aunt Grace!" she cried, throwing her arms round her aunt.

"And you may be the princess," exclaimed Uncle Ed, coming up in time to hear the last remark, "and I will row the princess up to the Eagle's Nest in time to watch the sun set! And then we will crown her queen!"

And handing the basket and oars to Aunt Grace, he swung Marion up to the dizzy height of his broad shoulders, and the three started merrily down the meadow toward the boat-house.—Youth's Companion.

Mrs. Dobbs was trying to find out the likes and dislikes of her boarder, and all she learned increased her satisfaction. "Do you want pie for breakfast?" she asked. "No, I thank you," said the new boarder, with a smile. "Pie for breakfast seems a little too much." "That's just the way I look at it," said Mrs. Dobbs, heartily. "I say pie for dinner is a necessity, and pie for supper gives a kind o' finishing touch to the day; but pie for breakfast is what I call putting on airs."

SUMMER RECORDS OF CHILDREN'S DEATHS

Records show that by far the greatest number of deaths among little ones occur during the hot summer months. The excessive heat, the difficulty of keeping baby's milk sweet, improper food all tend towards bringing on those dreaded baby troubles—cholera infantum, diarrhoea, dysentery and other stomach and bowel troubles. To guard against these troubles Baby's Own Tablets should be kept in the house. An occasional dose of the Tablets will prevent these deadly summer complaints or cure them if they come on suddenly. Mrs. O. Morin, Ste. Tite, Que., says: "My baby suffered from a severe attack of cholera infantum, but after giving him Baby's Own Tablets the trouble disappeared and he regained health splendidly." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Her Husband—Because, angel mine, you are too light for such heavy work.

Sleeplessness.—Sleep is the great restorer and to be deprived of it is vital loss. Whatever may be the cause of it, indigestion, nervous derangement or mental worry, try a course of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills. By regulating the action of the stomach, where the trouble lies, they will restore normal conditions and healthful sleep will follow. They exert a sedative force upon the nerves and where there is unrest they bring rest.

In thirty years there has never been one of Wilson's Fly Pads sent out that would not kill flies in immense quantities, if in the first place the flies were in the house, and if the housekeeper followed the directions and got them to the Pads.

HIGH FINANCE.

"What are you doing, little boy?" asked the curious stranger as he passed the suburban garden. "I'm catching potato bugs," responded the youngster with the paper box. "Pa gives me a penny a dozen for all I catch."

"Ah, and you are too tender-hearted to kill them. What are you going to do with them?"

"Give them to Billy Jones next door to sell to his pa."

"And what will he do with them after his pa has seen and paid for them?"

"Oh, he'll slip them back to me and I'll sell them to my pa to-morrow."

ACCOMMODATING.

It was an overcast, indeterminate sort of a day, but the drug clerk was cheerful as he whistled behind the prescription desk and chatted with a friend in the front shop. Presently a customer came in and made a small purchase.

"Pine day," he remarked.

"Great!" replied the clerk, enthusiastically.

The customer went out and was followed by another. He, too, made a small purchase and commented on the weather.

"Mean weather," he remarked.

"Beastly!" said the clerk, dolefully.

"Getting warmer," remarked a third customer.

"Hot!" said the clerk.

Ten minutes passed. Another individual drifted in from the outside world and made a purchase.

"Chilly, isn't it?" he said to the clerk.

"Cold as the pole!" agreed the clerk, with a shiver.

His friend had listened to these exchanges with interest.

"See here," he demanded, "what kind of weather do you think this is, anyway?"

"Same kind as the customer," replied the drug clerk.

There are millions of packets of Wilson's Fly Pads sold every year, and every Pad will kill every fly that drinks the poisoned liquid from it.
