Workingmen and the Church.

Bishop Ingram of London, in one of his addresses at the Anglican Congress at Halifax, is reported as admitting that the church has failed to win the confidence of the workingmen. He states that he is very anxious to find out why this is the case. "We never yet as a church," he says, "caught the ideals that inspire them. We do not see the visions that draw them. We criticize them, but we do not understand them. We do not know what they are aiming at." Bishop Ingram very clearly states that the church as a church does not know what the workingman is aiming at, but the Bishop himself has at least some idea of what it is, for a little later on he says that the workingman wants "equality of opportunity," and "when he asks this he only asks something God wants him to have."

If the workingman wants equality of opportunity, and God wants him to have it, and the church is doing nothing to help him get it, and the workingman knows that the church is not helping him—where is the difficulty in understanding the workingman's lack of interest in the church?

Workingmen want justice. They want their share of the good things of life here and now. The church promises them happiness after they leave this earth, and either does not know or ignores or defends the cause of their present misery.

Civic Beauty.

Prof. Hutt, of the O. A. C., Guelph, addressed a meeting of the Horticultural Society in Toronto lately. His subject was "Civic Beauty," and was illustrated with views of well kept streets and streets not well kept. Peterboro was in the list of "horrible examples," and of course that progressive city doesn't like the advertisement it got, especially as it has a publicity campaign in progress, with the object of bringing Peterborough's good features into public prominence. The Examiner, in its comments on the situation, says:

"It is not much consolation that Peterborough was not the only place pictured as possessing neglected and unbecoming streets. That other Ontario towns and cities are on the black list, is little comfort for Peterborough being put into the rogues' gallery of portraits of frowzy, untidy streets. What adds, or should add, to the humiliation of the citizens, and especially of the civic custodians of our streets, is the fact that the conditions so discreditably pictured are easily preventable. If our civic authorities took ever so little thought, took ever so little interest in the beauty and tidiness of our streets; if they did ever so little in the direction of improving them and keeping them in a shape that would save them from public caricature and the holding up of them to public reprobation, different results would follow. With ever so little care we could have beautifully appearing streets; the cost would be trifling—a good deal of thought and very little money. If the Board of Works showed the slightest interest in keeping the streets clean and tidy, and free from weeds, the citizens would co-operate with them, and each, stimulated by the example of the civic authorities, would, in turn, do most of the work of keeping the streets tidy—each keeping his own street front swept and garnished. We don't want much of the kind of advertising we got at the recent meeting of the Canadian Horticultural Society. We can't blame anybody but ourselves. The duty and desirability of making and keeping our streets tidy and attractive, as can easily be done, has been urged upon the civic authorities time after time in these columns and elsewhere. That this duty is one that cannot be neglected with impunity, we have had humiliating proof. We have also proof that others—our rivals—have a sense of the beautiful in streets as a factor in making a city attractive and desirable as a place of residence."

A good many towns in Ontario are in a position to take warning from Peterborough's trouble, and would do well to fix up a little for fear this man Hutt should drop in on them with his kodak some fine day. Fenelon Falls is possibly in danger, with the rest of them, though in justice it must be said that there has been a great deal of improvement in the past year or two, particularly by private citizens, in beautifying their grounds and places of residence. As much can scarcely be said of the side streets, where the weeds have been neglected and the roadway and sidewalks are not in the best of condition. There is plenty of work for a Civic Improvement League, which has been much talked of, and should be organized without delay, so as to be ready for active operations next spring.

Now It's Lakefield.

Lakefield Board of Trade at a recent meeting discussed the matter of better train service. It was the unanimous opinion of the Board that the service now given, is extremely unsatisfactory to the citizens of the village and not at all such as they have the right to expect in view of the very large and profitable traffic done by the G. T. R. over this part of their system.

The secretary of the Transportation Committee was instructed to communicate with the officials of the road requesting them to give such a service as would enable a person to go from Lakefield to Toronto and return the same day. Examples were given of other places, not so important as Lakefield and a greater distance from Toronto, whose citizens were able to make the return trip in one day.

The next question discussed was the closing of the Cement Works. The Lakefield Portland Cement Co., notwithstanding the fact that the village has given them a very heavy bonus and exemption from taxation, have kept their factory closed during the whole season and there is no evidence to show that they intend ever to open it again. People of Lakefield believe this is on the face of it, a very gross breach of faith on the part of the company. No one in his senses could be made to believe that the taxpayers of the village would have voted such an exceedingly liberal aid to the company if they had not had good reason to believe that the works were to be of a permanent character.

CORRECTION.

The Gazette's report of the concert at Rosedale, held on August 23rd, stated that the proceeds were to go into a fund for the erection of a hall. This was an error. The amount raised at the second evening's entertainment, about $16, will be used for hall purposes, and the first evening's proceeds, $68, are in aid of the Presbyterian Church.

VIKING II WINS.

The much talked of race between Hopkins' yacht of Lindsay, Viking II, and the Thief, owned by Cliff Scott, of the Falls, took place on Thursday afternoon last. That is, it took place and it didn't take place. The Thief's engine got some kind of a kink shortly after the race started, and could not be got going again. The relative merits of the two yachts are therefore practically undecided, although the Viking gets the race, having gone over the course. A future contest may be held, and it is hoped may end more satisfactorily.
