The Remedy For Hard Times.

The signs of the immediate future all point to another partial collapse of the present system of industry. Not many moons ago the financial journals, that keep tab on the business pulse of the United States, were warning the financial magnates to sit tight and watch their credit. In the city of Detroit to day 16,000 people walk the streets because the owners of a certain automobile factory cannot find purchasers for their wares. Everywhere, on the railway trains, in the street cars and in the hotel lobbies, where men of business are wont to congregate, one hears the following dialogue:—"Well, Bill, how is business?" and the response inevitably comes back: "Going to the dogs entirely."

Fellow worker, to you, who do nothing in your life but work unceasingly in order to eke out a miserable existence, which you have been mistaught to call a living, these conversations and newspaper articles may mean nothing, so you think. But if you paid as much attention to the plain every-day facts of life as you do to the murder news and diverse proceedings with which you dope your brains from the daily papers, you would soon begin to realize that these rumors foretell a storm on the industrial field that will reek its awful fury on you and your class.

Do you know that, decade upon decade, you and every one of your fellow workers all over the (civilized?) world have been creating vast amounts of wealth that you and they do not enjoy? Do you know that the reason you do not enjoy the greater portion of what you produce is because you work for wages? Do you know that the reason you work for wages is because you and your class do not own the means of life? If you do not know these facts, it is high time you did. It is up to you to study the industrial world through your own eyes, instead of looking at these things through the dust-begrimed spectacles of the capitalist class.

Go into the factory, mill or any other industrial establishment, and you see gigantic machinery racing along untiringly, at the behest of the worthy worker. I suppose you think these machines are running and assisting you to produce wealth for use. If you do, it is time for you to clear your mind of such deception. While it is true that the articles produced by you and your class with the aid of this machinery may in many cases be useful articles; still that is not the object for which the machinery does your bidding. The machinery, the factory and all the accessory means of life belong to another; and this other permits you to work for what it costs you to purchase a bare living—not for the purpose of making articles for use, but for the purpose of selling those articles at a profit for the owner.

The whole of our present industrial fabric consists of buying and selling. Even you yourself buy and sell when you get the chance. You have only one thing to sell, that is your power of labor or your life's energy, and you must sell it day by day in order to buy the cheap food and clothing you must have in order to live, and rent the miserable tenement that you have been taught to miscall a home. You must sell yourself day after day, week after week and year after year to the other class; the class that holds the deeds of ownership to the land and machinery of production. And when you sell yourself you are forced by the competition of the labor market to accept the price of an existence, because there are always sufficient men out of a job who are willing to work for an existence if you refuse; and you know it. The price of an existence means at the present time that you can exist on about one-fifth of what you produce; or, in other words, if what you and your class produce sells at an average of ten dollars a day, each one of you gets on an average two dollars a day for the glorious privilege of working in a musty dungeon ten hours each day.

The class who own the means of life will only let you work when they can make a profit; and they can only make a profit while they can continue to sell the goods which your labor has produced at more than your cost of existence, or what you have received in wages. If you have received in wages only enough to buy back one-fifth of what you have put on the market, the capitalist must find other buyers in order to dispose of the goods and keep you employed. It is perfectly clear that you cannot, under the wage system, keep the market clear and keep yourself employed; and the capitalist is not now, and never will be, able to find other buyers to keep the market clear. In fact, the capitalist is becoming less able to keep the market clear every day, as is shown by the continually increasing number of unemployed and the ever increasing frequency of hard times. So, when the goods are stacked on the shelves you are thrown out of work. Then your wages cease, but when you are thrown out of a job, do you ask the capitalist to give you back the stored up wealth you have created? No, you go about like the advertisement labelled "Gold Dust Twins," saying "We want more work."

If you would only stop to think a bit, it is not work you want, it is a living; and the reason your living is no longer visible at present is because you have worked too much. Fellow worker, get wise, and vote the reins of government and the means of life into your own hands.—Lorne Cunningham
