KINGS WERE LIBELLED

Offenders Did Not Get Off Easily in the Long Ago

People who went out of their way to libel their Sovereign in days gone by did not usually get off so lightly as did the defendant in a recent notorious case.

For instance, Leigh Hunt, the famous essayist and poet, was sent to prison for two years—exactly twice the length of Mylius's term—for calling George IV, "a fat Adonis of fifty." And George was not even King at the time, only Regent.

Going back further still we find John Stubbs, a student of Lincoln's Inn, arrested for libelling Queen Elizabeth. He was sentenced to have his right hand cut off, and the barbarous punishment was inflicted in public in the market-place at Westminster by driving a cleaver through the wrist with a mallet. The moment Stubbs lost his right hand he waved his cap with his left, crying, "Long live the Queen."

Then there was that unhappy Walter Walker, grocer, at the sign of the Crown, who said he would make his son heir to the crown. When Edward IV. was told of this merry jest, he ordered Walker to be arrested and put to death for treason.

Almost as hard was the fate of the Buckinghamshire churl who, drinking one day in a village alehouse, spoke disrespectfully of Henry VIII. "King Hal," he hiccupped, "is no true king. Would I had his crown here, that I might play football with it."

The libeller was hanged, drawn, and quartered, and pieces of his body were distributed as a warning amongst the market towns of the county.

OFF WITH HIS HEAD

Amusing Story Told of Louis of Bavaria

A service-paper relates an amusing story of King Louis of Bavaria. His Majesty was much annoyed one occasion when the soldier on guard at the palace gates neglected to present arms. The truth was the soldier did not know His Majesty by sight.

"Why don't you present arms?" the latter asked, angrily. "Don't you know to whom you are indebted for your daily bread?"

The sentry glared angrily at the King, and, imagining him to be the Army baker, said:—

"So you are the miserable son of a baker who furnishes the soldiers with bread, are you? Well, I should like to have you by yourself in some quiet place. I'd spread your ungainly anatomy over three kingdoms! I'd make dough of you!"

ELECTRIC MOUSETRAP

The latest from America is an electric mousetrap. It is connected with the usual lighting installation, and as soon as the mouse touches a copper plate in the trap the current passes through its body.

MUST HAVE FELT SHEEPISH

The Londoner who stole a leg of mutton from a Metropolitan butcher's shop and then allowed himself to be caught by a constable rejoicing in the name of Mutton must surely have felt sheepish.

NOT SICK FOR 76 YEARS

Lord Swaythling Was a Marvel of Good Health

The late Lord Swaythling, the famous Jewish banker, was a marvel of health. The first illness he ever had was contracted in January, 1909, when he was seventy-six years of age, through a heavy London fog, when he was laid up with severe bronchitis. Lord Swaythling considered that his marvellous health was entirely due to the fact that he was a strict observer of the Mosaic laws pertaining not only to daily food, but to hygiene. Lord Swaythling was head of the great banking firm of Montagu and Co., and during his career had the honor of being consulted by no fewer than three Chancellors of the Exchequer—both Conservative and Liberal. He passed through many crises in the City, and well remembered when the Bank of France was so short of gold that it paid the bankers to draw golden napoleons from the bank itself, and then over to England to be melted down into bars, and resell them to France at a profit.

A CENSUS OF THE STARS

Orbs That Move Less than a Second in a Century

Mr. F. W. Dyson, the Astronomer-Royal, speaking recently on a Census of the Stars, said that great as was the value of the census of the stellar population, it would be of far greater value when additional details were given with it. To what questions could they reasonably expect answers were a census to be taken? They could ask in what part of the sky a star was situated. That could be clearly answered of every star that they could see on photograph. They might ask how bright a star was, and an accurate answer could be given of every bright star and an approximate one of a 10 other sorts. In what direction was a star's proper movement? The proper motion of thousands of stars could be given. How fast was a star moving in miles per second towards or away from the sun? The number of stars in respect of which that question could be answered had been rapidly increasing in the last few years, and had reached some thousands. They could also ascertain whether a star was double or single. In 1885 it was calculated that there were 300,000 stars, more than a magnitude of 9½. Now, more than a million for the whole sky had been definitely ascertained as regards their positions and magnitudes, and the number of stars approximately in the sky down to the 14th magnitude was 24 millions. The star with the largest proper motion was quite a faint one. It was discovered in 1897, and it moved 8.7 seconds a year. To make a complete circuit of the sky it would take 150,000 years. In the constellation of Orion there eight bright stars that moved less than one second in a century.

TO WHITEN KITCHEN TABLE

Take equal parts of white lime and sand, and sprinkle on the top of the table, then take a wet cloth and rub well in the same direction as the grain of the wood is running and then rinse with clean cold water, and a beautiful white top will be the result.

Have You a Bank Account?

The money is safer in the Bank than in your house or in your pocket. A CHECKING ACCOUNT provides a safe and convenient way of paying bills, as each check issued returns to you as a receipt. A SAVINGS ACCOUNT keeps growing all the time because interest is added twice a year. Call at

The Bank of British North America

and talk to the Manager about it.
