

RECORD HUSKERS

What Constitutes a Big Day's Work in the Corn Field

An Amherstburg despatch says: Since the publication of a story that a Kent County corn husker had established a record by husking 109 bushels in a day, there has been a good deal of discussion about what really constitutes a big day's work in the corn field. Though 50 to 75 bushels is considered a good day's work, day in and day out, there have been men who average 100 bushels. The story is told that James Mason, now at Alberta, was a great husker in his day, throwing out 140 bushels in ten hours. Robt. Clark, of Manitoba, son of the late Thomas Clark, of Colchester South, has a record of 111 bushels in nine hours, while Sol. Baltzer, Sylvester McLean, of the same township, and Albert Wilson, of Amherstburg, are all 100-bushel men, so it would seem that the Kent County man's 109 bushels wasn't such a big record after all.

A NOVEL CURE

Medical Man Effects Remarkable Cure of Dipsomania

A new and remarkable cure of dipsomania has just been effected by a medical man. The patient was an apparently hopeless case. His doctor prescribed a drug, to be taken in minute doses to begin with.

"It is a violent poison," the latter explained, "and can be absorbed only gradually. In time the system becomes inured to it. The drug must be mixed with your wine or spirits at the rate of one drop the first day, two the second, and so on until your system is able to assimilate a whole glass of it. The drug will discolor your wine."

The dipsomaniac dutifully did as he was told, increasing the dose very gradually. He noticed that, as the doctor had said, the color of his wine grew paler as he added more of the drug. He observed, also, that he became accustomed to drinking less and less wine as he increased the proportion of the drug. At last he drank with pleasure a glassful of the latter with only a dash of wine in it. He is now absolutely cured, and feels no craving whatever for wine or spirits. He went to thank his doctor, and said:

"Now, doctor, tell me what that marvellous drug was which has made another man of me."

"Water!" said the doctor.

KING HAS NEW BARBER

Why His Majesty's Beard is Trimmed
by a New Man

King George of England has changed his barber. For many years past the late King Edward and King George himself always had their beards trimmed and their hair cut by a certain celebrity, who is known to all the peerage as "Charles." This individual's full name is Charles Taschke, and his establishment is in Regent Street, where the youth of London are attended to by a large staff.

The trouble arose through Sir William Carrington, the comptroller of the royal household. Sir William also patronized "Charles," and ran up a rather large account, which he omitted to settle. "Charles," rather unwisely, as his friends say, pressed for payment in no unmistakable terms.

Sir William was furious, and, taking King George's bills to his Majesty, who is very economical, pointed out that "Charles" had been overcharging disgracefully. King George promptly turned his back on the unhappy "Charles," and a new royal barber—H. M. Lee, of Curzon Street—will reign in the place of M. Taschke.

SOUND ADVICE

When Mr. Blank was thinking of marrying a girl "with money," a friend advised against it.

"My boy," he said, "before I was married my wife inherited $500 from her grandfather. The whole town knew it. When I built a shop they smiled."

"His wife's money," they said.

"When I built a house the same smile went round:

"His wife's money."

"After a while I took stock in the new electric company.

"Ah," said the treasurer, "I see you are investing some of your wife's money."

"All my life that poor little $500 has received the credit for everything I have been able to achieve.

"As a matter of fact, my wife spent the money the day she got it for a diamond-ring and a piano. She lost the ring a week later, and I think some of the neighbors have wished heartily that she would lose the piano!"

TO WASH SCARLET FLANNEL

Mix a handful of flour in a quart of cold water, and boil for ten minutes. To this add some warm suds, and then wash the flannel, gently rinsing rather than rubbing it. Now rinse in two or three waters comfortably warm to the hands—no hotter—and hang to dry in the shade. By this method the color should remain good after many washings.

When the trees begin to blossom and the violets to bloom; when the bull-frog in the meadow warbles boom-ab-boom; when the geese are flying northward and bright butterflies are out; when the robins go housekeeping in the broken water-spout; when grasshoppers are hopping and black bats come out at night, and fly into your bedroom attracted by the light; when birds fly down the chimney and hens walk in the door, and beetles hold conventions in the middle of the floor; when mud is o'er your shoe-tops as you cross the new plowed land—you may count on it for certain, sweet is near at hand.
