PRESENCE OF MIND AVERTS A TRAGEDY

Little Girl Was Playing With Nitro-Glycerine, Which She Thought Was Water

A Pittsburg dispatch is as follows: Tripping along gayly with four quarts of nitro-glycerine, which she thought was water, eleven-year-old Mildred Anderson narrowly escaped death along with her father and six oil well shooters, at the Cameron farm, in Washington county. Only the presence of mind of John Anderson, the girl's father, averted a tragedy. Oil well shooters had gone to the Cameron farm to shoot a test well. Finding their explosive had been affected by the cold weather they placed it in two cans of hot water to thaw it. Little Mildred, who thought the cans contained only water, seized them in a spirit of playfulness and began to run about with them. Circling away from the house, the child was unnoticed for a few minutes. Then she turned her course toward the group of men, who, with blanched faces and wildly beating hearts, realized suddenly that Mildred was carrying nitro-glycerine—enough to blow them all to atoms. It was fortunate for the well shooters that they were too startled to make an outcry. As it was, Mildred neared them before they could utter a sound, then Anderson came to the rescue. "Hello, Mildred, be careful of the water, dear. Come slowly and show daddy how to put down cans without spilling any," he called with a smile and in kindly, even tones. "Oh, I won't spill any, daddy," the child replied in merry accents. "See how careful I am." With mock gravity little Mildred carefully deposited the cans with their perilous contents on the ground. "See, I didn't spill one little, teeny drop," cried the child, clapping her hands, while the oil shooters and her father began at last to breathe more freely.

So completely unnerved were the oil men that they refused to shoot the test well that afternoon. They said they were afraid they would bungle the job and not escape as fortunately as they had in the morning.

FRIVOLOUS DEFINITIONS

Reputation—What the world thinks about us; character is what our wives know about us. Gossip—The counterfeit coin of conversation. A Secret—Confidential information that one woman gets another woman to keep for her. Inspiration—A word used by poets in mistake for perspiration. A Theatrical Angel—Known by the company he keeps. The Leisure Class—Tramps and the very rich. The Dreamer—To-morrow I made a fortune. Optimism—A habit that women have of looking upon the bright side of things; mirrors, for instance. The Engagement Ring—Matrimony's promissory note.

SKIN-GRAFTING

May Be of Much Value to the Scientific World

Through the successful outcome of an operation performed upon Anna Windt, 18 years old, the surgeons of the Samaritan Hospital at Philadelphia have made a discovery which may be of great benefit to science in the grafting of skin. The discovery is that skin taken from the body may be kept in a healthy condition for an indefinite period without suffering harm, and may then be used to replace skin that has been burned or otherwise destroyed, and will "take hold" as well as skin cut fresh from the flesh. Twenty square inches of the right forearm of Anna Windt are now covered with skin that had been out of contact with the body for five entire days, and kept on ice during the time in order that it might be preserved. Dr. Wayne Babcock, who has received much attention from the medical world during the past few days because of his invention of several new anaesthetics, made the new discovery. He tried by experiment to ascertain whether the theory he had held was true, and the trial more than satisfied him of the correctness of his belief.

FUTURE FARMERS

A National School of Agriculture for the Boys and Girls of England

A National School of Agriculture is shortly to be founded here, where boys will be trained to take positions in England or the over-seas Dominions as farmers, farm managers, and stewards, and gardeners. Girls will be taught dairy work, plain cooking and laundry work. The necessary capital has already been found, and it is the intention to secure a farm of about 100 acres near a large city, preferably London, where the work will be carried on under the tuition of qualified instructors. To commence with, about 100 pupils, boys and girls, will be specially selected from the elementary schools. No fees will be charged, either for tuition or board and lodging. For the boys a course of training similar to that given to Boy Scouts will form part of the curriculum. All the produce raised on the farm, which is to be conducted on strictly commercial lines, will be sold, and the scheme, it is hoped, will be entirely self-supporting. In cases where the value of their work exceeds the cost of maintenance wages will be paid to the pupils.

WHY A HORSE ROLLS

Mr. E. T. Daubeny, writing on this subject in "The Selborne Magazine," says: "Horses are fond of rolling on the ground, and no animal more thoroughly shakes itself than they do. After a roll they give themselves a shake or two to remove anything adhering to the coat. The habit is of much service to horses living in open plains. On being turned loose, at the end of a journey, an Arab horse rolls in the sand, which acts as blotting-paper, absorbing exudations from the body. A shake removes the sand, the coat soon dries. Cavalrymen in hot climates sometimes put sand on their horses as the simplest and quickest way of drying them."
