THE SECRET OF THE BEST GOOD SHOE

It is the secret of the deacon's shay made famous in the poem of Oliver Wendell Holmes.

"Have you heard of the wonderful one-horse shay, That was built in such a logical way, It ran a hundred years to a day?"

The deacon observed that a chaise breaks down but does not wear out, so he reasoned:

"The weakest place must stan' a strain, An' the way ter fix it as I maintain, Is only jest ter make that as strong as the rest."

That well-balanced construction of part for part is the secret of the wearing qualities of The Geo. A. Slater Shoes.

They are so made that the weakest part will stand the strain.

Still Another Conservative

Writes to the Toronto Globe on the Horse Question. Read what Mr. F. C. Grenside, V. S., of Guelph, says:

The effect of the consummation of the reciprocity agreement between the United States and Canada upon the horse trade of this country is being considerably exploited as an argument against this pact.

I have read with much interest two interviews given by Mr. C. A. Burns, of the Burns & Sheppard Repository in Toronto, to a representative of The Toronto World, in which that gentleman endeavors to picture the dire calamity that will befall the horse interests of Canada and those of the Province of Ontario in particular, if the agreement becomes law. Mr. Burns is evidently considerably alarmed as to the effect it will have upon his repository business. I trust that he overestimates the injury it will do him, as I have great respect for him, for his grand establishment, and for his admirable business methods, but I cannot agree with him in his conclusions as to the effect this reciprocal arrangement will have upon the horse interests of Canada.

In order that I may not be accused of any sinister motive in writing this letter, I may state that I have always been a Conservative, and have never given any but Conservative votes in my life, and have journeyed all the way from New York, where I lived seventeen years, to vote for the Conservative candidate in my old home in Guelph. Although I lived in New York so long, I never took the oath of allegiance, and am still a British subject, and have come back to Canada to spend the remainder of my days.

It is not a pleasant thing to have to vote against one's party, but I feel convinced that this reciprocal arrangement will be a good thing for this country, so will support the Government. I may further add that I have been identified with the horse trade of both Canada and the United States for thirty years, and have seen every phase of it, so that I think my experience justifies me in expressing an opinion upon the influence this pact is likely to have upon the horse interests of Canada.

Mr. Burns unwittingly uses one of the best arguments I have heard in favor of reciprocity when he says in effect that the struggling settlers of the Canadian northwest will get their horses fifty dollars cheaper if the pact goes in force.

The Government is legislating for the Dominion, not for one Province, and we ought to be glad to have the settlers of the northwest, who buy their horses chiefly on credit, and who are incidentally building up the country, get them as reasonably as possible.

Of course, Mr. Burns was speaking from an Ontario standpoint, and was entirely influenced by his solicitude for Ontario breeders of horses, consequently we must meet him on those grounds. We all agree that the Ontario breeder is getting good prices for his horses now, but the question is, would the prices become lowered if the pact is consummated? My opinion is that they would not, and if there is a change it will be upwards. People seem to lose sight of the fact that we in Ontario are right alongside of the greatest horse consuming territory on this continent, and that this same territory is practically a non-horse-producing one. Take New York and New Jersey, and the seaboard States from Maine to Maryland with fifteen millions of inhabitants, and they do not raise ten per cent. of the horses they use. Now we in Ontario are closer to this market than any horse-producing State in the Union, unless it is Pennsylvania, and it is questionable if this State, thickly populated as it is, has many horses to spare. Who would not rather have a market close at hand than ship horses from fifteen hundred to three thousand miles, particularly if he can get as much or more for them?

Mr. Burns says horses are dearer in Canada than in the States. They may be cheaper in the southwestern States, as he says, but they are not in the east, for I know both markets. I bought thirty work horses from Burns & Sheppard last spring, and I know these horses would have cost me more anywhere from Buffalo east. I left the eastern market only a year ago, and I know what horses are selling for there. Undoubtedly, the Canadian northwest has been a boon to the Ontario farmer, but take down that tariff wall and give us that great eastern market which is at our very door, and we will not need the northwest, for we will be flooded with eastern buyers. We will not lose all our northwest customers either, as there are many settlers from Ontario there who would naturally come to a market they know.

There are other obstacles to the importation of American-bred horses into Canada that are not generally known about, which have nothing whatever to do with the tariff, and will not be affected by the pact. They are precautionary measures, instituted by the Veterinary Director-General of Canada, to prevent the introduction of glanders into this country from the States. One provision is that all horses imported into Canada have to be subjected to the Mallein test, which is a means of determining whether or not they are the victims of glanders, particularly in its latent form. The application of this test means at least a couple of days delay, and some expense. Another provision is the prohibition of the importation of unbroken horses that cannot readily be handled to apply the test to. This practically shuts out the unbroken ranch horses of the western States.

Everything taken into account, there is no doubt that a considerable part of the Canadian northwest trade can be retained for Ontario, but whether it is or not the eastern trade is of more value to us.
