Sitting or Setting.

Is it sitting or setting that a hen does? This is a question that a class in a certain school disagreed upon and so the teacher put it to a vote. Which is correct—the hen is sitting on twelve eggs, or the hen is setting on twelve eggs? After much discussion a vote was taken and there were sixteen votes for setting and eight for sitting. The exclaimed the teacher, the minority is right as usual. The hen was sitting on twelve eggs. It takes thirteen eggs to make a setting. The sixteen voted to take his decision as final. They are going to appeal to the superintendent on the ground that any number of eggs is a setting that the hen sits on if she is only setting.

KING'S CREAM HORSES

Interesting Facts About the Famous Hanover Creams

Of all the King's horses that find a home at the Royal Mews at Buckingham Palace, the most interesting, perhaps, are the "Hanoverian creams."

The first creams to come to England were brought from Hanover by King George I, and the strain has remained pure and unbroken ever since. The beauty of the creams lies in their magnificent manes and tails, otherwise they are thick-set and sturdy-looking creatures. In Hanover these horses were used as draught horses, but these English descendants of theirs are very pampered creatures.

Every day they are exercised on the soft tan of the Royal riding-school, but except on State occasions they have no real work to do.

There are eleven cream-colored horses at the Royal Mews.

Their training begins when they are four years old, and about a year after that they are ready to be harnessed to the State coach. Their coats are polished till they shine like satin and their manes and tails are carefully brushed and braided with blue ribbon.

The trappings of the creams are a mass of crimson Russia leather and brass, and weigh 126 pounds to each horse; and it takes two grooms to lift each set of harness and set it upon their backs.

A BACHELOR'S DOWRY

M. Vassalleff, a St. Petersburg millionaire, bequeathed his whole fortune to provide poor engaged couples with the means of getting married and setting up in a comfortable home of their own. In his will he explained that his relations were rich enough already without any of his money; therefore he left them none. But that he wished to enable poor girls to marry. "The reason that so many beautiful women never get a husband is solely because the young men of the present day have no self-respect. They do not look for beauty, but for money, when they seek a wife," said he. "I love all women, especially those who have to work for their living, and that is why I want to help them to get married, for I consider a single life is the saddest thing on earth."
