Gulf Between Rich and Poor.

There are but few people in the United States who realize the wide gulf that exists between the rich and the great majority of the rest of the human race. And if they do realize it, this majority do not demonstrate that realization when they go to the ballot box. Here is a picture that should convince those who do not do much thinking for themselves that there is an aristocracy in America.

The description I am about to give you is taken from an article printed in the New York Sun. It is the description of the New York residence of ex-Senator William A. Clark, of Montana, and demonstrates very clearly that some people are able to enjoy at least a few more comforts than some of the rest of us. This house, after ten years of building, is now occupied by Senator Clark, his young wife, two small children and a retinue of servants.

Here are some of the unique features about this New York home of the Clarks:

One hundred and twenty-five rooms.

Four breakfast rooms.

Three elevators, for use by the servants and for freight service.

One six-ton icebox. This refrigerator equipment is larger than is found in the majority of meat markets of the cities.

Three 275 horse-power Scotch marine boilers.

Three turbine electric generators.

Thirty bath-rooms and one Turkish bath equipment.

Secret entrance to every room.

Sun room and observatory on the roof.

One Chinese lounging room.

A "quarantine" room.

Huge swimming pool.]

Large banquet room.

Passenger elevator for 25 persons.

Breakfast-room built of 170 panels, all of different design.

Giant stairway that contains every known kind of marble.

Half a million dollars' worth of bronzes.

One million dollars' worth of rugs.

Two million dollars' worth of pictures.

The foregoing are but a few of the unique features of that gorgeous palace of the Clarks in New York. And this description is typical of the homes of the Vanderbilts, Goulds, Whitneys, Harrimans, Astors, Ryans, Murphys, Thaws, Phipps, Dukes, Fricks, Pfisters, and the rest of the minority class who regularly vote the Republican, Democrat and Non-partisan tickets.

Now I am going to ask you flat dwellers, shack dwellers and the millions of others in America who dwell in modest homes, to compare the luxurious surroundings of the upper class with the cheap furnishings of the places you call homes. Compare them with the right kind of an interrogation point in your mind, and decide for all time whether or not your interests and the interests of this plutocratic class are identical. And if you reach the conclusion that they are, do not waste any time on the study of Socialism. But if you believe they are not identical, then find out what Socialism is and do your own thinking in the interest of your own class.—Silas Hood, in the New York Herald.

How We Learn.

You and I are controlled by ideas, just as the Mahomedans are. You cannot tell which ideas are the more correct until you get others with which to compare them. For instance, if you had never seen a horse and never read about one, when you saw the first one you could not tell whether it was a big horse or a little one, or if there were other colored horses. It is thus with all other subjects. If you have never read and got a clear, distinct idea of some other system of society than the one under which you have lived, then you can't tell whether it is the best or not. You cannot tell whether Socialism is better than the present capitalist system or worse, until you have got a clear understanding of Socialism, or a state of society based on the common ownership of capital instead of the private ownership of it. We Socialists understand the present system just as you do who support it, for we, too, have been raised up under it. But we also have a more or less clear idea of Socialism, and it proves to us that it will be much better for all than the one we live under. That is just why we did away with a kingdom—some of the people who had studied the matter were convinced that a republic would be better than a monarchy; and they agitated for it and were denounced as anarchists, free lovers, against the home, and just such epithets as are now applied to Socialists. If you will read history you will find this true. I think it would be fair to claim that we Socialists understand the present system better than those who know not the principles of Socialism; for the study of the latter has given us a far clearer view of the present system than we had before. And you will have to admit that Socialists are readers and thinkers, even if you think we think wrongly. Come now, examine our horse, and then compare it with yours and see which you would prefer.—Appeal to Reason.

If you want to kick against present conditions, you can deliver the biggest bump with a Socialist ballot.

When you sell your muscles to another, you do not sell also the right to think for yourself and to vote in your own interest.
