

MEN OF NERVE

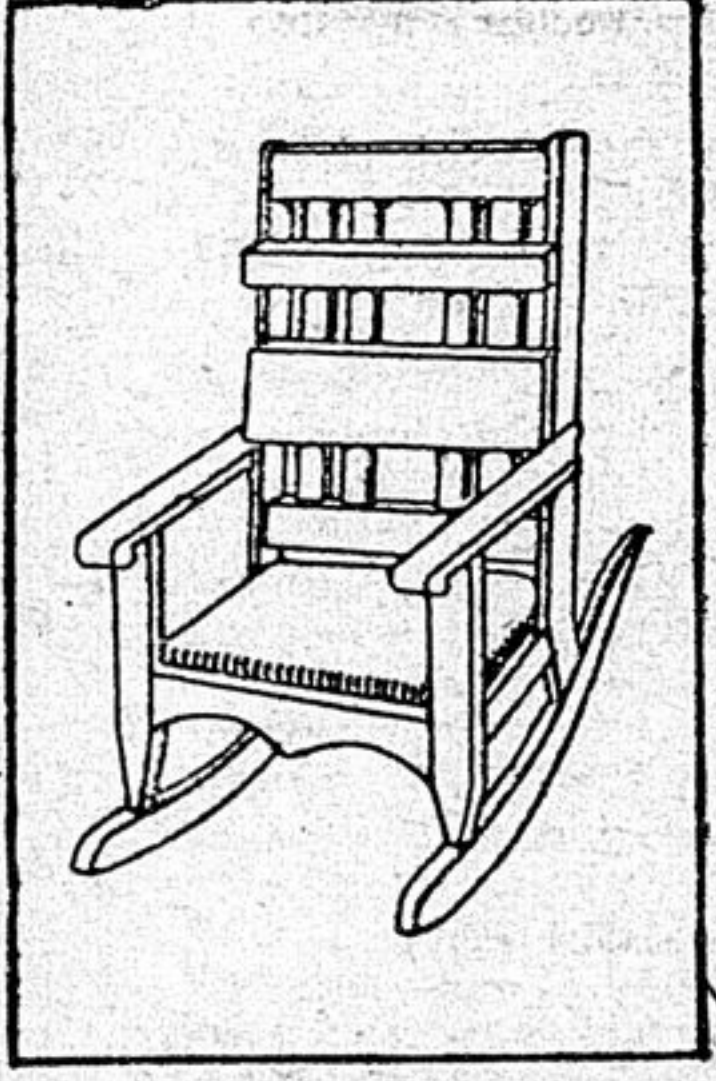

Most Structural Steel Workers Are of Irish Blood

It is a curious fact that most of the structural steel workers engaged on various huge structures in Canadian cities are of Irish blood. In fact, the Irish and Swedes, or "square heads," as they are called, have almost a monopoly of this dangerous trade. The Irish will take more chances than the men of any other nationality, but the Swedes are not far behind, and how they divide the honors was illustrated recently. Two steel columns for the top storeys of a skyscraper had just been set in place at the corners, and stood starkly up fifty feet above the nearest cross girder. Each column was about eight inches square. When the news spread that a photographer was about to take a picture of them, two workmen "shinned" up the columns and stood on the top. The man at one corner was an Irishman, the other was a Swede. Sometimes these structural ironworkers lose their nerve. Why it happens, or how, they do not know; but sometimes a sudden panic will overwhelm a man. Then, if he knows his business, he will shout for help, for he cannot help himself. Now and then a man gets a mad desire to hurl himself from the roof, and if he is not restrained he will go as surely as though a great magnet were drawing him down to the earth. Oddly enough, one terrible fright rarely causes a man to give up the business. He gets back his nerve in a few days and becomes as daring as ever. It is said that an ironworker who goes to a new job when a building is already high in the air has not the nerve of a man who has been on the building from the ground up. Accidents are more likely to occur while the first few storeys are under construction than later on, for the men take more chances, forgetting that a 40-foot fall is about as deadly as one twice as long.

ADJUSTABLE CUSHIONS

Head Rest and Back Rest on Separate Rolling Bands.

In making a chair with a cushioned back it has heretofore been impossible to arrange the cushions to suit everybody, so the manufacturers have tried to strike the average. A Utah genius has designed an arrangement of adjustable cushions, which will fit tall persons or short persons, revolves on rollers attached to top and bottom of the chair back. On two of these belts to a back-rest and on the other two a head-rest. As will be understood, these cushions may be adjusted at any height or at any relation to each other, thereby providing a comfortable back for any person, no matter what his or her physical peculiarities. The moving bands roll easily, but not so easily as to slip out of place when the chair is in use.

IGNORANCE OF THE BIBLE

Professor H. F. Hamilton publishes some figures respecting the 150 Freshmen who entered Amherst College, Massachusetts, last year. They were set a paper of six Bible questions, of which two were "the easiest that could be thought of," while "two were exceedingly difficult, so as to test the intimate as well as the average knowledge of the men." More than 79 of these undergraduates could remember nothing about the fall of Jericho, 37 knew nothing of Cain, 40 knew nothing of Daniel, and 65, 102, and 105 failed to answer questions about Saul, Gideon, and Timothy respectively. Professor Hamilton also reports that in visiting certain schools in New York he found, among pupils preparing for college and nearly of an age for entrance, whole classes that could not tell the story of Daniel in the lion's den.

THE LAKES OF KILLARNEY

Embedded in the Midst of Miles of Majestic Mountains

The beautiful Lakes of Killarney are equal, if not superior to all other noted beauty-spots in Western Europe. The scenery around them possesses a peculiarity, richness, and variety, and the vegetation a wild luxuriance which cannot be thoroughly appreciated until seen. Among the great writers who have given the lakes unqualified praise are Sir Walter Scott, Wordsworth, Thackeray, Macaulay, Sir Walter Scott said it was "the grandest sight he had ever seen;" Wordsworth, that "in point of scenery the finest portion of the British Islands;" and Sir David Wilkie, the great painter, that "for beauty and grandeur, he had never seen them unsurpassed."

The lakes lie embedded in the midst of wildly majestic and lofty mountains, whose sides and steeples are covered with the most luxuriant verdure and shrubbery, and in many places with splendid forest trees. The highest mountains are Carrantal and Mangerton. The bosom of the lakes is dotted with romantic islands, some of which are connected by bridges with each other and with the shores; and all around are cataracts and waterfalls of every size and form, many being prominent points of interest in the excursions. Besides their beauty, the Lakes of Killarney are of great interest on account of the many prehistoric remains found around them, and the ruins of the celebrated monasteries of Innisfallen, Muckross, and Aghadoc. The lakes cannot be satisfactorily seen and explored by the tourist in less than three days. Those, however, who have leisure, and wish to be more minute in their explorations, may spend weeks in roaming among the mountains and gleams with profit and gratification, each day exhibiting new and increasing beauties, the closer and longer they are examined.
