NOTICE.

E. FITZGERALD,

HIS NARROWEST ESCAPE

Mr. F. C. Selous, the famous sportsman, tells an exciting story of the narrowest escape he ever had from death. In 1878 he, with three other hunters, encountered a herd of elephants close to the Umbila River. "This herd," says Mr. Selous, "numbered some seventy or eighty animals, of which we killed twenty-two of the largest tuskers. We had had a long day before we came up with the elephants, and the subsequent galloping about after a time completely exhausted my horse. The fourth elephant I shot, a big bull, chased and very nearly overtook my tired horse, his terrific trumpeting sounding like an advancing locomotive. However, he just failed to catch me, and subsequently I killed him."

ABOUT MEERSCHAUM

Meerschaum is not, as some people imagine, the foam of the sea, but is a soft, soaplike stone, which is mined like coal. In Asia Minor its mining is an important business. Pits are first dug, and so soon as a vein of meerschaum is struck horizontal galleries are laid out. These galleries are often very long, and they vary in depth from 25 to 150 feet. The crude meerschaum, which is called "ham-tash," is yellowish white in color, and a red clay envelopes it. The blocks are sold on the spot at from $25 to $200 a cartload according to their quality. They are then soft enough to cut with a knife but they are dried before being exported.

A Walking-Stick Farm

A walking-stick farm has been established in Surrey, England. Instead of the cornfields, pastureland, and root-crops usually expected on a farm, the walking-stick acres present the appearance of long, neat rows of tiny sapling trees, some four years old, others younger.

Quite a forest of walking-sticks may be produced in four years; but the handle occasions some delay. To obtain a right-angled handle, the growth is pegged down along the ground, and from this the sapling shoots vertically upwards.

OPTIMISTIC

Life is extraordinarily interesting. It is a splendid thing to be born; it is a splendid thing to live.—The Bishop of Southwell.

7,500 words is the average number uttered by public speakers in an hour.

Railways use up over two million tons of steel a year, almost half the world's product.

A piece of ordinary gingerbread makes an excellent barometer. If the atmosphere is in that condition which threatens rain, the gingerbread becomes moist and pliant, while the approach of dry weather restores it to its normal condition.

A Popular Song

An office boy has composed one of the most popular songs of the day in New York—"The dearest old lady I know."

A New Stocking

Stockings embroidered with life-size figures of mice are now worn in New York, thus realizing the old rhyme about "running up the clock."
