A Beam in its Own Eye.

The Orillia Packet is so terribly concerned about the liquor ad note in the Toronto Globe's eye that it cannot perceive the beam in its own. The Packet has always opposed the liquor traffic, it does not publish hotel or liquor advertisements, but, being Conservative in politics, it opposes Rowell and his banish the bar policy. The Packet's partizanship is too strong for its temperance principles. This is a beam of such proportions as to utterly disqualify the Packet as a mote remover, and completely nullifies its campaign of misrepresentation of the Globe's position on the subject.

It might be as well to point out, also, that according to Christian Guardian and Packet logic, the Packet is open to the accusation of being in alliance with specious interests. It says in its reading columns:

Haywood's vinegar is absolutely pure; the Government analyst says so. So are his spices. You can't have good pickles unless you are particular about the vinegar and spices you use.

The vinegar and spice interests do not monopolize the Packet's affections, however. It has a soft spot for the patent medicine interests, as witness this:

Make it a point to keep a bottle of Cooke's Canadian Cough Balsam in the house all the year around. 25c. and 50c. a bottle at H. Cooke & Co's.

Middy waists, Heinz pickles, ladies' fine lisle stockings, black sateen petticoats, and "numerous other articles" are also advertised. Does the Packet hold itself responsible for the consequences of the sale of these commodities, or the neglect of the public to buy and use them? Worse still, the Packet advertises furnished rooms to rent to parties having no children. The population of Orillia will never grow as it should in the face of such discouraging opposition from the town's leading newspaper.

A Canadian Nickel.

The Cobalt Nugget says:

One of the eminent geologists on the excursion to Cobalt, Sudbury and Porcupine is astonished that there is no nickel coin in Canada. It is an extraordinary thing, he says in effect, that while the world has to come to Canada for her supply of nickel, yet all your nickel articles are imported from the United States, England and Germany. This is surely an economic crime.

He took in his hand a much frayed and worn Canada five-cent piece. The inscription had gone, it was worn to a shadow and it was altogether a most disreputable piece of coinage. "You use this," he said, "in your coinage, when you have in your mines at Sudbury at first hand the best material in the world for a good medium in the smaller values."

There seems to be no answer to the riddle. From the ores of Sudbury almost all the nations of the earth obtain material for their currency—except Canada. The United States use it, a nickel in the land of Stars and Stripes is in fact a household word to signify five cents, the French utilize it in their franc, the Germans employ it, but the Canadian would rather handle the diminutive five-cent silver piece than employ the Sudbury ore to make a nickel coinage. It is one of those things that no fellow can understand. There is nothing in the way of it but apathy on the part of the Dominion Government. Apathy and ignorance of conditions, a combination before which the eloquence of a Demosthenes would fail.

Boost the Fall Fair.

The fall fair season, which opens with the great Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto, will soon be in full swing. The Toronto fair promises to be a record breaker in every respect, and it is to be hoped all the other fairs throughout the country will keep up the pace. The farmers, or the townspeople either, but especially the farmers, of any community, should not need to be urged to become members of their nearest agricultural society, and if at all possible make exhibits at their local fair. It is safe to say that the membership of any of the smaller associations is not more than half what it should be and could be if a proper degree of interest were taken. If every farmer who is a non-member could be convinced that the reason any particular fair is not larger than it is, or the prizes not more substantial, is because he himself does not help, there might soon be a change for the better. Those who are members and attend and exhibit and work are responsible for making a fair as good as it is. Twice the membership would make it twice as good, perhaps more than twice, for the officers and every one connected with it would feel encouraged to exert their best efforts. The Fenelon Agricultural Society's fair will be held this year on the same dates as last year, September 10th and 11th. Last season's extreme lateness militated against the success of the fair. This year's harvest is earlier than usual, and there should be nothing to prevent a record turnout.

The Fire Damage in Haliburton.

Minden Echo:—During the past few days we made enquiry as to the extent of the bush fires in this county, and were fortunate enough to meet people who could tell from their own personal observation.

The Digby fire reached the settlement at Moores' Falls, creeping on its way towards Norland. Another branch of the same fire came out toward the neighbourhood north of Deep Bay, Gull Lake. To head this off, one of the settlers started a fire near his clearing, which for a time threatened to do more damage than the big fire. However, no buildings were burned except an old barn. Another fire which came through from Longford township, destroyed all the beaver hay west of the South Line neighborhood.

In Stanhope, the hills north of Maple Lake have been swept, but no damage except to the timber has been reported.

The Snowdon township fire has practically swept over the entire lumbering district, from the Lochlin and Gelert neighborhoods to Irondale and vicinity of Gooderham. It has also crossed the Irondale road and burned its way down towards the Three Brothers back of the Furnace Falls neighborhood. In this fire Mr. Arthur Graham lost some two hundred cords of wood.

So far, we have heard of no one being burnt out, fireguards having been ploughed in the fields. But the regrettable feature is that so much territory has been burned over, destroying the young timber in these lumbered out districts, in many places burning through groves of young pines that had already reached a diameter of a foot or more, requiring many years of conservation to replace.

Missionary Institute at Lindsay.

A Missionary Institute will be held in Lindsay on Monday and Tuesday, Sept. 22 and 23, 1913, under the direction of prominent missionary leaders connected with the "Missionary Educational Movement," formerly the "Young People's Missionary Movement." This movement is inter-denominational in character, not, however, in the sense of being a separate, distinct organization; but, rather, intra-denominational, in that it is the union of all the denominational Missionary Boards in the creating and diffusing of an intelligent missionary interest.

Its purpose is to assist in the missionary education in the Churches by training leaders at Conferences and Educational Institutes, to promote giving, to foster prayer for missions and to enlist young men and women in missionary service as a life work.

Its field is the Sunday School, Young People's Societies, Adult Bible Classes and other organizations of young men and women, and the large army of unorganized men and women of the Churches.

The Institute is considered a very effective agency for missionary education and inspiration. It consists of a programme composed of mission study classes, public addresses on missions and discussion of missionary organization, methods and service.

The aims of the Institute are to bring the largest possible spiritual uplift to each community, to enlist young people in a campaign of mission study, to introduce wise plans of missionary education in Sunday Schools, to promote the practice of systematic giving to missions, to emphasize prayer as a missionary force, to present the opportunities for Christian service as a life work, and to aid the local church by increasing the efficiency of every missionary worker. Will you not try to send as many delegates as possible?

Programmes will be forwarded to outside points as soon as possible.

The Independent Order of Oddfellows at the annual session of the Grand Lodge of Quebec introduced a new clause in the constitution providing that no hotel-keeper selling spirituous liquors could be received as an Oddfellow. The meeting was unanimous in favor of the new clause. Previously there had been regulation debarring bartenders from membership. A. L. Dodridge, of Quebec, was elected Grand Master.

The New Dam.

The work so far accomplished in connection with the new dam has, strictly speaking, been preparatory, unless the drilling of holes in the rock for blasting out a trench maybe excepted.

The water was shut off the middle section above the falls some days ago and the old dam blown up with dynamite, several very heavy charges being necessary. There has only been a comparatively small force of men engaged so far, but a gang of Italians is expected any day, and a building has been put up for them south of the Lindsay power house. There is a lot of rubbish to clear away and other preliminary work to be done before real construction commences.

Drowned at Ball Point.

A drowning accident occurred at Ball Point on Tuesday afternoon, when George Westaway, the seven year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Byron Westaway, was drowned while engaged in helping another boy, Howard Williamson, aged about fourteen years, to draw water from the lake. The two lads were backing a horse and rig into the water, when one of the hind wheels struck a stump, throwing the boys off. Neither of them could swim. Williamson, however, managed to get out again, but Westaway was unable to do so. Drs. H. H. and G. Graham were summoned, and a doctor from Sturgeon Point was also present, but too great a time had elapsed for their services to be of any avail. Great sympathy is felt for Mr. and Mrs. Westaway in their bereavement.

Chas. Nicholson caught a 34½ pound lunge near Bobeaigeon last week. This is the largest fish taken in these waters since Russell McDougall caught his famous 37½ pounder near Rosedale six or seven years ago.

A shocking accident occurred at Havelock last week, when three children of William Robinson of that village, aged about eleven, eight and four years, respectively, were buried beneath a slide of earth while playing in a sand pit near their home. It was some time before the bodies were recovered, and when found, all three were dead.
