Challenge to Socialists.

There is a marked tendency on the part of the courts to again come to the rescue of the masters in the class struggle that is growing fiercer and fiercer. Not only are troops called out while there is a strike, but the strikers are being enjoined by injunctions right and left. Perhaps one of the most far-reaching decisions that have been made for years is that which comes from Omaha, declaring that cities have no right to engage in business that will protect them from sharks who happen to have acquired franchises; and that the franchise, once granted, becomes in effect a perpetual license to rob the people; that if this robbery cannot be accomplished in the terms of the franchise, then these terms may be stretched to admit of the making of profits. It is not only an unbelievable infamy that such a decision has been made, but it is a direct statement that socialized work is illegal—the first declaration of the kind ever made. This becomes, therefore, a special challenge to Socialists.

Socialists must accept the challenge. We must show that the people are superior to the courts and legislatures which they create; that the fact that they have delegated certain powers to corporations proves that they themselves possess the powers which they delegated to others. The courts must become responsible to the people. The people must have the same right to turn the judges off that every employer of labor reserves toward the man he employs. The courts that are created especially for the purpose of upholding a system of robbery must be entirely abrogated, and the power they have assumed of reading their own opinions into law and of declaring unconstitutional laws regularly adopted must be taken away from them. The police powers must be captured and used in the interest of the toilers. We have gone long enough respecting the robbers because the courts they appoint and the officials they control would protect them in their loot. It is time the working people arose to do something for themselves—Appeal to Reason.

Wouldn't You?

If you had an income rolling in upon you of a hundred thousand dollars a year through your ownership of stocks and bonds, would you not take it?

Of course you would.

Supposing you knew it came from the labor of slaves, would you not take it just the same and enjoy it?

Of course you would.

You would unconsciously use the Socialist reasoning. You would say that for you to give up your wealth would not help free the slaves. They would be just as bad off after as they were before.

For wage slavery rules and wages are governed by the cost of living. There are over $600,000,000 taken annually in rent, interest and profit from the producing class of Canada.

Your $100,000 per year would be but one-sixth thousandth part of the annual robbery taking place. Your giving up your $100,000 per year would be like a man who picks up $1 out of $6,000 stolen, and throws it in the ditch because it is stolen money.

If you get $10,000 per year, you get only one-sixty-thousandth part, or one-sixth-hundredth of one per cent.

If you refused your income, it would be but a mere drop in the sea of robbery. And it would not go, even then, to the producing class, for they get but their wages.

You would take your revenue and say you were powerless to change the system, and that system would remain until the people who are robbed united to stop the robbery.

You would enjoy your stolen income, and would consider those from whom the vast annual wealth is taken were very, very foolish not to stop the robbery. You would think just as the Socialists do.

We want the workers themselves to unite and with their ballots storm and capture the ramparts of parliament, to make laws to stop the robbery practised upon their class.—Cotton's Weekly.

Born Tired.

"That man was born tired," said a boss of a factory a short time ago, in pointing out a workman to a visitor. Perhaps the boss spoke with more truth than he was aware of. The visitor made a quiet little investigation of his own, and discovered that the man's father was a worker who had been broken down in the factories he had worked in. His mother was forced to attend to the wants of a family and take in washing besides, before and after the "tired man" was born. The husband's wages were small, and the wife worked night and day to help in rearing the family. Is it any wonder the aforesaid man was "born tired"? Further investigation reveals the fact that every other member of the family, male and female, was obsessed by that "tired" feeling. Were these people responsible for their condition? Or do you think that the capitalist system had something to do with it? —Exchange.

Charity is only the giving back to the robbed a little of what has been taken from him by the robber.

The man with the big bank balance cannot understand the unemployed problem. Yet he helped to create it.
