THE MAPLE

This Tree is Very Important in Ontario's Industries

Maple is the most important hardwood used by Ontario's industries, over three-quarters of a billion (750,000,000) feet being used every year. The wood is divided into two classes by manufacturers: hard maple and soft maple.

Maple is a hard, stiff material, and its value depends chiefly on these two qualities. It is difficult to season and shrinks considerably and checks badly; it is also quite perishable, but it does not warp nor twist after being properly seasoned. The soft maple is slightly tougher but softer and lighter than hard maple, and is not used in very large quantities.

Accidental forms with the grain curled and contorted, known as curly maple and bird's-eye maple, are common and are highly prized for decorative work.

Maple does not grow in any quantity north of the 49th parallel in Ontario, and is practically confined to the basin of the Great Lakes. It seldom grows in pure stands like pine or spruce, and the quantity still standing would be difficult even to estimate. The material is used by twenty-eight industries, heading the list in six of them. The greatest quantities are used for hardwood flooring, wood distillation and furniture. For these purposes and for all others where strength and stiffness are not of paramount importance, birch could be substituted in many cases, and is being substituted more and more each year, as the supply of maple decreases.

Clean Dust Pan

A new convenience for housewives is a long handled dust pan with a lid that opens automatically when it is placed on a floor, closing again as the pan is lifted.

A New Stove

An electric cooker of the Dutch oven type, which its inventor claims has all the advantages of a cast iron stove, is an English novelty.

Cedar Poles

Of the telephone and telegraph poles used in Canada 79.1 per cent. are cedar; including Western cedar the percentage is 91.5.

Merchants of Magdeburg, Germany, organized a school to train young women who wish to become clerks.

West Virginia employs upwards of 60,000 men in the mining industry.
