The Late Lord Strathcona.

STRATHCONA WAS WEALTHY.

Late High Commissioner's Holdings Estimated at $80,000,000.

A despatch from Quebec says: The death of Lord Strathcona will have a material effect on the revenue of the province for the current year. It is understood that the immense holdings of the late High Commissioner will fall under the succession law of Quebec, and calculations are easily made that the revenue from the estate will amount up to millions of dollars. It is said it was anticipated that the value of the holdings was about $80,000,000, and, if so, the succession dues at eight per cent. would amount to $6,400,000. This amount will very likely be modified when the value of the estate in Quebec is known, as this; very point has arisen over the judgment of the Privy Council in the Cotton case. At all events, the province is expecting to benefit to the extent of several millions by the decease of Lord Strathcona.

His private generosity and public benefactions had been beyond record or belief. He left a name and record illumined by personal affection and public honors and a career worthy of envy and emulation by the civilized world.

CONFESSION OF CONSTABLE.

Personally Gave Rope and Revolver to Murderer to Aid His Escape.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: Constable Robert Reid, of the city force, one of the two officers guarding John Krafchenko when he escaped, made a full confession on Wednesday before the Royal Commission, and implicated Percy Hagel, the lawyer, John Buxton and John Westlake. Constable Flowers, his fellow guard, he clears of all suspicion. Reid had formerly withstood a seven-hour grueling before the commission which seemingly had justified him, but he completely reversed his sworn statements.

In the witness box Reid told how he personally had given the rope, key and revolver to Krafchenko two days before the escape, while the back of Flowers, the other guard, was turned. The loosened bars in the window, he said, had been tampered with while Ryan, the day guard, was asleep in the cell. The constable stated further that all the arrangements for the escape were made in the office of Percy Hagel, Krafchenko's counsel, where Krafchenko had sent him to see Hagel. He said he did not know what had induced him (Reid) to help Krafchenko. Buxton had given the gun to Reid in Hagel's office, and the number had been filed off in Hagel's presence. Hagel had told him that Westlake, who was to hide Krafchenko after his escape, could be trusted to do so without "squealing." Hagel, he said, had gone to Plum Coulee to get $400 to handle the case. He did not know whether he got it or not.

EXPORTS SHOW INCREASE.

Canada's Domestic Produce Shipments Advanced Over 28%.

A despatch from Ottawa says: During the nine-months' period ending Dec. 31, 1913, the total trade of Canada showed an advance of 10 per cent. upon the trade of the corresponding period of the year before. According to the figures issued by the Department of Customs Friday, the total trade, excluding exports of foreign products and imports other than those of domestic consumption, from April 1 to Dec. 31, 1913, was $857,856,893, as against $779,587,058 in 1912, the increase being $78,269,835.

The great increase was in exports. During 1913 the total exports were $388,707,375, as against $307,525,768. Of the exports, $359,115,658 were of domestic produce, as against $278,652,157, the increase thus being $80,463,501, or over 28 per cent.

Imports entered for consumption showed a slight decrease, standing at $498,741,512, as against $500,934,901 in 1912. Dutiable goods showed a drop of nearly $3,000,000, from $326,417,953 in 1912 to $323,434,277 in 1913. Free goods, on the other hand, increased by nearly $1,000,000, from $174,516,948 to $175,307,235.
