Enemies of Fearless Newspapers.

From Miami Metropolis.

Men may be measured as accurately by the enemies they make as by the friends that they have drawn about them. It is always creditable for a man to have enemies in the factions that stand for corruption or tyranny—no man can take a vigorous stand for any good cause without stirring up the hostility of those who have been profiting by the evils he excoriates.

And what may be said of men may be said of a newspaper. Every contest in the interest of the people, every fearless onslaught upon wrong, arrays against a newspaper certain ones who are enjoying privileges, legal or illegal, which they think should not be interfered with.

The more successful a newspaper is in arousing public sentiment for the enforcement of law and discountenance of demoralizing tendencies, the more active are its discomfited enemies in their endeavors to injure it—the casual reader has no idea of the many obstacles that are thrown in the path of a newspaper which seeks conscientiously to serve the best interests of a community, and would be astonished at the various tactics taken to "punish" it for daring to oppose the evils by which some men would prosper.

Sometimes an effort is made to cut off subscribers, a method that seldom accomplishes any but increased circulation; for the public, as a class, are appreciative of a leadership against danger; sometimes through the advertising columns the offended element think to withdraw patronage and cripple a paper, though in this direction the "biting off noses to spite faces" is too apparent to assure its success. The very courage that has led the paper into a fight against wrong insures it a welcome in the homes of a community that no advertiser can dare ignore—sometimes the public finds out the reason for a firm's disapproval of an advocate of good, and then it is many a day before the stigma against that firm can be washed away.

Altogether a newspaper which is trying to throw all of its leverage on the side of good must expect to make enemies—in fact, it must welcome the possession of enemies as showing the value of its antagonism to things that are corrupt.

The French Cavalry.

From the Montreal Evening News.

France will utilize about 575,000 horses. That nation has the best cavalry on earth to-day. This is so because she was the first of the Great Powers to see the value of thoroughbred blood in producing remounts, and she has followed this course for thirty-five years. No price has been too great for her to pay for an English thoroughbred sire of the proven kind who had demonstrated his ability to carry weight over a distance. She paid $187,500 for the English Derby winner, Flying Fox. Up to 1912, she had paid $2,700,000 for English thoroughbreds, and counted this money well spent. To-day France possesses 3,000 thoroughbred mares, as against 850 registered in Germany.

In fact, she has practically cornered the long distance strain in Europe, so much so, that French-bred horses are winning most of the classics in England, the home of the thoroughbred breed. Durbar II, winner of this year's Derby, is the last instance.

The French horses are trained to do feats that make a man hold his breath. As yearlings they are taught to gallop over rough ground strewn with fallen trees, low fences and all sorts of obstacles. As they grow older, they are taught obedience and, by rigid training, are hardened for any sort of task that may confront them in actual warfare.

Perhaps, when the lessons of this great war are being profited by after it is all over, Canada will pay more attention to the thoroughbred king of the horse world, whose "get" can safeguard the interests of the whole nation in time of stress. We have the room and the climate.

Every sane person in this community knows that the present war is a very serious one, and many of our young men may soon leave their homes to go to the front, perhaps never to return.

Be of good cheer. The farmers have made good progress harvesting. Some are already done cutting, and if the weather remains favorable for about a week many will finish a light harvest. The quality of the grain is lighter than last year. We are promised seed time and harvest, summer and winter, but light harvests are not mentioned.

The tenders for the Rural Mail Route from Cameron via Powles Corner was opened at Ottawa on July 31st, but we have not heard yet who will face the storms for four years.
