DISINFECTION OF ROOMS. Vaporized Corrosive Sublimate and Sulphur Do the Work. Professor Konig of Gottingen, in a recent article on this subject, says that at one time, while he was practicing medicine in Hanau, he suddenly discovered that his bedroom was thickly inhabited by obnoxious insects. A friend assured him that he could easily get rid of the pests and proceeded to fumigate the apartment with corrosive sublimate. The success of this measure was most gratifying, and when the room was opened the dead bodies of various kinds of insects were seen strewn about the floor. This incident led the professor to hope that the same means would be effectual in destroying the infectious elements of contagious diseases, and a trial in private houses after scarlet fever or measles and in hospitals after erysipelas

The mode of procedure is very simple. From 11/2 to 2 ounces of corrosive sublimate is put on a plate over a chafing dish, and then the windows and doors of the been called a dead beat by the passenge and the apartment is thoroughly aired. The person entering the room should take the precaution to hold a sponge or cloth over the mouth and nose in order not to inhale the vapor. The following day the windows are again closed, and some sulphur is burned in order to neutralize any of the mercurial fumes which may linger about the furniture and other articles. The room should then be again aired and cleaned, when it will be ready for occuparcy.-Philadelphia Record.

A Horse With an Appetite.

"An old horse with an inordinate appetite is one of the curiosities I found on a recent trip in eastern Kentucky." said Colonel Andrew Yates. "This ancient animal was once ridden by a mail rider over in West Virginia, and had to go in a jog from daylight till after dusk each day except Sunday. But after long service old Bawley was traded off to a farmer living over on the Kentucky side of the mountains, and he recently pensioned the aniears of corn, a two gallon bucket of bran, a gallon of oats, and ail the stale bread and meat in the house. Bawley is as fond of meat and bread as of hay and corn, and, collected under the supervision of the in fact, will eat almost anything, not drawing the line at fruit or sweetmeats. The four legged gourmand once broke in the hog pen and emptied a large trough of slop which had just been poured in for the porkers. His owner said he once heard the old horse whining in pain and went out and dosed Bawley, his imprudence in devouring a bucket of new made jam having superinduced serious illness, but the horse was ready to eat the following morning as usual."-Louisville Post.

How Votes Are Lost.

In spite of the repeated warning that any mark on the ballot other than the cross in its proper circle or square will invalidate the ballot and cause didate's name appears in several different columns, due to a nomination or indorsement by various organizations.
