Mr. Lewis Bidwell, a farmer in Sydney Centre, Delaware county, N. Y., has the opportunity to develop a herd of cows which will pretty nearly uniformly bear twins and, other things being equal, would be more valuable than ordinary cattle. Three years ago one of his young cows bore twins and has done so each year since. Its first calves were heifers, and one of these has been bred and has borne twins. Probably in these last the twin bearing tendency will be so well developed that it will become hereditary. Or, if we follow the old story, how the patriarch Jacob developed ring streaked and speckled calves from cows of solid color by placing striped willow wands before the watering places of the cattle, it may be possible to secure occasional pairs of twins among cattle that have not been bred to the practice of twin bearing. When the cows are mating, let one of his cows that has just mated with the bull see another cow with twin calves by her side. When a few cows with twins are thus developed, it will be easy to increase their number. The cow has much imagination and it is particularly active at mating time. But to secure twins the cow should be in vigorous health, so that she will pass two receptacles from her ovaries when she is in heat. It is only the cows that do this that can bear twin calves. There are germs enough in the speematozoa of the bull to create 100 calves at each impregnation provided there are eggs enough in the womb to be fertilized. But this double breeding will not exhaust the cow it she is well fed and cared for, nor will it shorten her breeding period, for that is made shorter rather in cows that are not allowed to breed at all. -Boston Cultivator.

Creameries Without Cows.

Young Atgy Vervain had gone to call on Miss Edyth St. Clare and had found her out, but her mother was at home and Algy was asked to wait, as Miss Edyth was expected at any moment. Suddenly footsteps were heard in the hall, and Algy, who was of a playful disposition, said gleefully:-"I'll just stoop down behind the big easy chair and appear suddenly and surprise Miss Edyth.' "Oh, that will be a dear little joke!" said Edyth's playful mamma. Edyth was the only one of the trio disinclined to be playful. Something had occurred to disturb her self-poise and she was "out of sorts." "Anyone been here while I was out?"

she asked. "Why do you ask?" inquired her smil-"Because that insufferably tiresome Algy Vervsin--"

"My dear! My dear!" "-said he was going to come poking up here, and-"

"Edyth! Edyth!" "And I'm so glad he didn't, for I-"Edyth-my daughter!" "-abominate the sight of him! He's so stupid and conceited, and-"

"Edyth, I beg of you!" "Now, mamma, you've said so yourself many a time, and-" "O, Edyth, I'm sure I-"

"Why, indeed, you have, mamma. You said the other day that he reminded you of that Italian organ grinder's mon-, key, and-"

"Edyth!"
"—I think so, too!" "Edyth St. Clare! Will you keep Edyth's girlish shriek rang throughout the house when Algy rose to his feet, and instead of uttering a playful "boo" said "I bid you good night, Miss St.

Value of Athletics.

The true test of the value of any field or track event is that of common sense. For instance, it is well to learn to run 100 or 200 yards at great speed, because there are frequent occasions when it is necessary to cover these distances in quick time. It is well to train for quarter-mile and half-mile running, because if one wants to go to any place distant a half mile or so, the quickest way to get there unaided is to run. It is the same way with the mile or three-mile run. If you come to a brook, you use your knowledge of the running broad jump. If you want to clear a fence (to escape a bull, for instance) you try the running high jump-not the standing high jump. If it is a high wall, and you have any knowledge of the pole vault, you likewise, have an advantage. Hurdle-racing teaches you to get across country fields and fences, and both the hammer and the shot events on the card give good training for emergencies that may rise. -Harper's Round Table.

Music Lessons!

MISS R. ROBINSON,

st., north, and will receive a limited number of pupils. Terms made known on application, -52-6m.

About a month ago HARD. WARE, STOVES and TIN. WARE took a tremendous advance; especially in the Stove Line. Again last week it stepped 15 per cent. higher.

Now as our Spring Shipments will be coming in shortly we desire to clear space for them, so for the THIRTY DAYS we will offer our customers the special advantage of having one of our Grand COAL OR WOOD STOVES at the lowest market

Thus since there is likely to be a steady advance in these goods it is worth while considering the matter and consalting us.
