COMMUNICATION.

About Hogs and Bacon, To the Editor of the Watchman.

SIR, -We were taking in live hogs to-day and there was one lot of 12 hogs that I consider are the best quality for English bacon trade that 1 ever bought, they were fed by Mr. Arthur Bell, of Verulam, and are a cross of Tamworth and Yorkshire. They were the real long lean hogs that are so much desired, six months and two days old and weighed 2220 pounds, or 185 pounds each. I have bought hogs from other farmers that were equal to these in weight for their age, but the extra good points about these hogs were the long lean body, light shoulders, and very light heads, and I know that when killed and split down the back will be an even thickness from the tail to the head of not less than 11 inches or more than 11 inches thick, which is the quality required for the bighest class of English trade. From what I know ef the English bacon trade I have no doubt that if we could get a steady supply of hogs just the same quality as these, we should be able
