Of Interest to Farmers.

A case of interest to farmers was recently disposed of before Judge Klein of Port Huron, in which the point involved was, whether a man is free to dispose of stock contracted for by a buyer, who fails to call for it on the date agreed upon. In this case Mr. Dargavel of Durham bought lambs in August, which were to be delivered on the 1st of October. As the buyer withstanding, according to his own evidence, the date agreed upon was about the first of the month. The judge held Dar gavel's contention that the lambs were his to be preposterous, and held that, where the animals were not a specific article in the case of a horse, should the buyer default the date, the farmer became nonresponsible for the contract, not withstan ding that money may have passed to bind the agreement.
