A Question of Quality, Quantity and Value!

Sets forth the argument for this month's selling features. No flimsy imitations are tolerated in this store for the purpose of naming alluring price-figures.

No offer from maker or importer is ever accepted unless the goods meet every demand for quality. No quantity too great when the inducement to buy is a sacrifice price that admits of selling advantage. No value overlooked in the buying affairs of this business. Its success is due to its efforts to obtain the best quality for the least money.

A COLLECTION OF LAGE CURTAINS.

500 pairs strong comprise the lot. An interesting item to offer just at housecleaning time. Perhaps far more interesting in actual saving than one could understand without a personal investigation. This is one instance where wholesale quantity buying demonstrates its value-creating powers for the consumer.

-A good number of young men listened to Mr. R. J. McLaughlin in the Y.M.C.A. rooms on Sunday last. His subject was the relation of politics to religion and its discussion was most thoughtful and suggestive. A few leading propositions will give an idea of its nature, for example: The chief service of the subject is to the state. Formerly that service was mainly military; now it is mainly civil. The office of the minister is to-day regarded as the highest, but it should not be forgotten that in the Jewish state it was not so. Moses was greater than Aaron, Saul than Samuel, David than Abiathar The ruler was greater than the priest or prophet. Every organization is a party. A political organization is a political party. They are necessary. The parties govern the country; the independents bring about changes in government.
