A SOUVENIR.

I found them in a book last night, These withered violets, A token of that early love That no man e'er forgets. Pressed carefully between the leaves, They keep their color still. I cannot look at them today Without an old time thrill.

Ah, me, what tricks does memory play! The passing years have fled And hopes that lived in vigor once, Alas! have long been dead. And this is all that I can say,

When all is said and done, Those flowers remind me of some girl-I wish I knew which one! -Exchange.

AN AMANA ROMANCE.

What led Herr Schweppe to join the Amanites no one knew but the elders. The Amanites did not gossip about it. They were not given to gossiping about anything. Work, duty, God-these were all their thoughts. But the visitors to the close lying Amana villages seldom failed to notice that Herr Schweppe was a gentleman and to wonder how he came to join the Amanites, with their plain clothes and their lives of toil. The mystery was hid in the books of the elders. There was once a visitor who claimed that he had had a glimpse of the page and saw "Bismarck' written twice on Herr Schweppe's record The name was "Von Schweppe," too, this visitor said, though it was only Schweppe now.

Be that as it may, Herr Schweppe's daughter Annie bore the traits of noble German birth. She was a dark haired, dark eyed maid, appearing among the other girls of the community like a bit of Sevres ware surrounded by pieces of useful but homely plain white china. Little did the thrifty, godly Amanites care for such beauty. In Amana a yard of blue calico was accounted as worth far more than a dimple.

The sorrows of exile killed Herr Schweppe when Annie was a child, before she had grown so beautiful. Annie had never seen a mirror, and no one told her of her beauty. Her mother gloated over it in secret. She loved Annie far better than the elders would have sanctioned, but when the child was near she was silent and cold. The life of repression had had its effect on poor Mother Schweppe.

In Amana the elders discouraged lovemaking. Men and women entered the church by different doors, and a line of sawdust box cuspidors marked off the men's side of the house. But among the girls at the Amana gasthaus were two persons who did not have the law of Amana in their hearts. They were not Amana girls, but came from outside, for no Amanite would have permitted his daughter to be subjected to the gaze of the strangers in the gasthaus. It was Madge and Nora, alas, who put all the mischief into Annie's

June moonlight was falling over the yellow wheatfields, and the fragrance of grapevine blossoms on the wall half intoxicated Annie as she leaned out of the small, square window next the slanting roof of her mother's cottage. It was while Annie was still thinking of the land that might lie outside of Amana that Madge and Nora came along and asked her to go with them to their party. And Annie stole away and

A ghostly little party it was, of Madge and Nora and Annie and only three others in the hotel kitchen, but as they sat in the glare of the oil lamp reflector it seemed to Annie the wildest dissipation. Two sheepish young Amanites slouched on the bench at one side of the kitchen, nervously pulling their straw hats over their faces if any one glanced at them. The third young man was entirely unlike these. Annie, big eyed and timorous, gazed at him in wonder. He wore such clothes as fitted him. His ruddy hair was brushed back from his ears, not over them, in the fashion of the Amanites. His face was clean shaven, his figure lithe and sinewy, and his merry eyes roved hither and thither while he regaled the company with music. It was a mouth organ which he played, but no matter. To Annie it was heavenly. She had never before heard music of any kind, for the Amanites attached a penalty even to whistling. Suddenly Annie was trembling and sobbing, and the player, conscience smitten, ceased his melody. He was not a great stranger to her, as Annie had thought. He had not so very many years ago worn the blue jean and straw hats of the community. He was none other than Hermann, the son of Herr Tappan, whom Annie had often seen in church when a child. The community had permitted Herr Tappan to send his son away to a college, for Hermann was to be the physician of the community, their Herr Doctor, as they called him.

Hermann understood the timidity of Annie. He, too, had once been restrained till all his thoughts were sadness. He bade the girls take her at once to her mother's cottage, and he watched them all till Annie had disappeared through the window But why should the young Herr Doctor come to Mother Schweppe's cottage next day, asking for her famous wine for his patients?

"Knowest thou not I have disposed of it long before this time?" cried

Mother Schweppe "I thought perhaps thou mightst be making it again faltered Hermann. "Make wine in June? What sort of a man!" And Mother Schweppe laughed window, and once she went alone with Hermann far down the solitary railroad track. But Madge loved Hermann, too, in her way, and, being jealous, she told Annie's mother.

The next day the elders came to Mother Schweppe's house. No one smiled, and the interview was full of long silences. Annie was taken down the street, an elder in front of her and an elder behind her. They put her in a house, far away from her mother, and gave her a double portion of work. Hermann, too, was taken to a cloister, though he went laughing. Six months' separation, six months' fasting, prayer and hard work was required, and if after that ordeal the two still wished to be married the elders would consider the matter.

A week passed. Hermann and Annie had sat in their places at the morning service, and it chanced that they, with meekly folded hands, emerged from the two doors of the church at the same moment. Suddenly each one advanced to the other; they met and walked away together. The elders were so astounded that for a moment no one could speak. There had never been such an audacious breach of the rules. Even the most venerable members of the community were dumfounded.

The whistle of an approaching train awoke them all to action. "Disobedience!" the chief elder cried, and all the elders hurried down the street to the railway station. Here they found Hermann and Annie, impenitent and defiant. There was a brief storm of angry words.

"We give you but one year to consider," said the long faced chief elder. "You may never show your faces here again if you come not back within the

"Thou, Hermann, leavest thy aged father, and thou, Annie, thy mother,' said another, more kindly. Annie looked down at her blue calico gown and her rough shoes. "What have they done for us?" she cried. They ascended the steps of the car. "Give them goodby!" called Hermann petulantly. "We come back no more."

And the train pulled away. "All the world loves a lover," said Herr Tappan to Mother Schweppe sadly, "but the lover loves no one but himself and his sweetheart."

So Hermann and Annie went to the city. They were happy, and there seemed to be no ghosts at their fireside. "Father and mother think more of their carrots than they do of us," they would say merrily when they spoke of Amana

In May their baby was born. He was a beautiful child, and Hermann and Annie never tired of watching him. Hermann could scarcely tear himself away from baby to attend his patients. Contagious diseases he refused to treat. Baby might catch them. Annie's face grew softer as she looked at the child. For hours they would amuse themselves watching him clasp a lead pencil in his chubby fingers. They cut off a lock of his baby hair and saved it in the Bible.

"Whom does the baby look like, Annie?" asked Hermann carelessly one

"Like you did when you were baby, I suppose," answered Annie gayly. Suddenly a startled look came into her eyes. The thought came to Hermann at the same moment. He dropped on his knees before the child. "Did they think of me as we think of our baby?" he whispered. Annie was sob-"God may yet forgive us," she cried. "The year is not ended. We may still return."

The good God had not ended Mother Schweppe's life. Herr Tappan, too, was still trudging among his vegetables when Hermann and Annie came back.

"It would have been a year tomorrow already," Herr Tappan said stolidly, but his withered lips went trembling, and he embraced Hermann and Annie and blessed them.

And Mother Schweppe paddled back to her cellar with a sly smile, returning full handed. "I have all this time since last autumn kept six bottles of wine for thee, Hermann," she said .-Julia Crawford Underwood in St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Her Sweet Mistake.

A short time since the daughter of a millionaire drove up to the door of a jeweler's shop, went in and selected a turquoise and diamond ring valued at $250. She made out her check for that sum and passed it to the proprietor, who glanced at it and then looked inquiringly up at the young lady and said. "There is some mistake here, I think."

The young lady flushed and asked if the check was not for the right amount. She was told it was, but-

"But what?" she exclaimed frigidly "Do you mean that my check is not acceptable?'

The jeweler acknowledged that he knew quite well who the young lady was, but explained that the check was not made out just as it should be, and he handed it back. The girl ran her eye over it and then turned a deep crimson.

"Oh!" she exclaimed, "I see!" And then she proceeded to make out another check. She had signed the first one, "Your own sweetheart, Jessie."

Wheat Futures Erratic-Chicago Options Advanced Sharply, But Reacted on Profit-Taking Sales-Prices.

Liverpool, April 19.-Wheat futures opened strong yesterday morning, at an advance over night, and sold higher during the day, and closed 11/d per cental above Monday's final figures.

Chicago, April 19.—The trading in the Chicago wheat pit was on a large scale yesterday. The crop damage reports that poured in from all quarters dominated the market. The May option opened at a good gain over night, and advanced 1%c above Monday's close. Realizing sales caused a late reaction of [this option to Monday's final figures, where it closed. The July option fluctuated to a similar extent, but closed with a net gain of nearly 1/2 for the day.

NEED NOT KISS THE BIBLE.

Judge King Told a Witness in Buffale Not to Do It-Law Signed.

Buffalo, April 19.—Bible-kissing as a form of oath was forbidden in Police Court presided over by Judge King yesterday. The judge said to a witness about to take oath: "Don't kiss the Bible; it is unnecessary here; and, anyway, there is a law against it. If it is not a law already, Governor Roosevelt will sign it."

The Bill Signed.

Albany, N.Y., April 19.—Governor Roosevelt yesterday signed Senator Brown's bill to prevent the spread of bacterial diseases by permitting witnesses to dispense with the kissing of the Bible on the administration of oaths.

A Birthday Beating Killed Her.

New York, April 19.-Little Edna Jane Morrow, an 11-year-old child of Elizabeth, N.J., died yesterday as the result of a "birthday beating." St. Patrick's Day was her natal day, and a boisterous schoolboy of her class gave her 22 blows on her arm with the edge of a slate, 11 "to grow on." That the blows were not brutal is evidenced by the children who were present and saw her laugh through the punishment. The arm grew numb however, and was soon completely paralyzed. Then the side of her body became affected, and the child lost consciousness. She died yesterday, and the doctors said the blows had caused blood-poisoning.

Self-Consciousness.

Any man who is good for anything, if he is always thinking about himself, will come to think himself good for nothing very soon. It is only a fop or a fool who can bear to look at himself all day long without disgust. And so the first thing for a man to do, who wants to use his best powers at their best, is to get rid of self-consciousness, to stop thinking about himself and how he is working altogether. Ah, that is so easy to say and so hard to do! Of course it is; but there are two powers which God put into the human breast at the beginning, whose very purpose is to help men do just this. These are the power of loving and working for an absolute duty, and the power of loving and working for our fellow men. When a man becomes aware of these great necessities, he is rescued from the consideration of himself altogether. The despotism of such a necessity sets him free, and he just goes and does what must be done with all his might. This is the history of every brave, effective man that ever lived. Moses, Luther, Cromwell, every one of them, dallied with the corners of the napkin, and almost folded up the talent; but the call was too strong, and each forgot his weakness and went and worked his fragment of the world's salvation.

He who comes with all his faithful work, and offers it to the Lord by whom alone he did it-his is the true humility. boro, Guelph, Thorold, Port Arthur and I beg you to think of this and feel it.
