The heavy wind during the last few days kept a small fire going and on Monday it got into Mr. Rettie's lumber pile, near the station, and were it not noticed by Mr. Wood in time the contents of the entire wood yards, would have been destroyed. There should be a stationary say. ladder placed at the church. The fire was near it the same day.

It looked like winter on Monday last, and felt like it too. The ground was covered with snow.

by a Clever American.

New York, April 30.-A London special to the Times says a man calling himself James Barthwick Arnold, and determined that he, as an individual, giving his residence as York, Pa., has swindled a number of Englishmen. He writes a preliminary letter, asking if the address is right and hinting about advantages to accure. Upon receiving a reply he writes a longer letter, saying Mrs. E. Avery, of Wilmington, died last January and left a legacy for the addressee, which is in the hands of a banker. He askes $48.86 (which is exactly a ten-pound note) to pay probate fees, upon receipt of which he will forward the legacy. The beauty of the trick lies in the fact that people, though not knowing Mrs. Avery, think some maiden relative or friend doubtless married a man named Avery, and they quickly snap at the bait.

Wrecked off the New Jersey Coast.

May's Landing, N. J., May 1.-Members of the crew of the schooner "Hazel Dell," of Atlantic county, who have arrived here, tell a story of hardship encountered by them on Friday last. schooner was loaded with oysters, was bound for Virginia and was wrecked on the Virginia coast on Friday night. She was caught in the squall on that night, when she had all sails set, and capsized without a moment's warning.

Charles Swift, of Atlantic City, Irving McLean, of Claremont, Va. and John behind. Walker, colored cook, all managed to cling to the masts. For ten hours they were exposed to the storm, the water washing over them all the time. Benumbed with cold, the colored cook was twice forced to let go. but was pulled back and helped up by McLean.

Finally McLean became so weak that he was forced to let the negro go, and he sank like a stone. Soon after daylight the shipwrecked salors were sighted by a passing vessel and taken to Norfolk. All mate $75. All the men lost their cloth- not to opposing, but to improving the bill.

A Startling Discovery.

L'Original, May, 3.—A startling discovery was made yesterday by Mr. Cameron the gaoler here. In the cell of the condemned murderer Larocque was found a blade of a penknife, sharpened to an edge as sharp as a razor's, which was concealed under the mattress of his bed. overworked and worried woman, despite her Although Larocque has been most wellbehaved and good-humoured since his conviction, it is plain that he has had suicide in his thoughts, and that he intended using the knife-blade with which to end his life. The blade was taken away and Larocque left without any means of self-destruction. He eats heartily and sleeps well, and seems little disturbed by tne prospect of his approaching death on the scaffold. He has not as yet spoken any word of confession that he is guilty of the terrible crime for which he has been sentenced to be hanged.
