It will be noticed how they utilize human suffering, and play upon the sentiment of humanity. "The pursuits of the vagrant are of the most protean character. One day he is the 'lurker,' another day he is the 'crocus,' sr 'sham doctor,' selling potions flavored with salt, or some form of nastiness; or he is the card sharper of the public house and race course; or he is the hop picker just returned from the country with 'genuine ketchup' made from 'cattle market mushrooms' (i. e., decayed pig's liver); or he is the sham smuggler, who sells brandy or tobacco, the samples of which are genuine, but the bulk of which consists principally of colored gin or hay."
> Or he brings ducks, eggs, apples, potatoes found too late by the eager household economist to be totally vile and worthless.—West-minster Review.
