SUNDAY READING.

COMING.

Thou art coming, O my Saviour, Thou art coming, O my King In thy beauty all-resplendent,

Thou art coming! We are waiting, With a hope that cannot fail; Asking not the day nor hour,

O, the joy to see thee reigning, These my own beloved Lord! Every tongue thy name confessing,

A Kind Voice.

There is no power of love so hard to get and keep, writes Eliza Burritt, as a kind voice. A kind hand is dead and dumb.

Home Reading for the Young.

What sort of a library have you in the house? asks The Christian Standard. In some homes, even where there are children growing up, two or three stupid old books comprise all the reading there is.

Starting in Life.

Be on hand promptly in the morning at your place of business, and make it a point never to be late, and perform cheerfully every duty says the Southern Church Advocate.

A Mother's Lament.

"I wish that you would talk to my daughter, sir. Perhaps you can have some influence for good over her. She won't listen to anything that I can say."

A Story With a Moral for Young Men.

There is an old fable, which has a special application for young men of the present day, who are over-anxious for riches. It tells of a man who, after long trying, had never made a cent over expenses, and who prayed to the god of wealth:

A Scotchman's Investment.

The following incident is related by Rev. J. Newell, who has been laboring as a missionary in Samoa, but is now with Mr. Moody in Scotland: "A blacksmith residing in the North of Scotland had saved up eight pounds ($40) against a rainy day."

How One Family Worshipped.

"I was out Gospel-ranging, and was quartered for the night with a brother who had five children; four were at home with him and one had gone to be with the Lord," writes Rev. John Crawford, in the Christian Statesman.

"First came the reading of the Scripture, which was interspersed with bright and earnest questions and with reverent remarks. The portion read struck me as wonderfully vivid and real. Then came a commandment from this one, and a benediction from that, with a some sweet little application to the family life of the day before."

First Parishioner—"I think we ought to raise Dr. Thirdly's salary." Second Parishioner—"I don't. He is such a conscientious man that he would feel bound to preach longer sermons."

Tommy—"Ma, teacher wants to know the difference between effects and consequences." Mrs. Figg—"I think I can answer that. When your father came from that banquet last night he felt the effects of it, and to-day he is suffering the consequences."

DOMESTIC HINTS.

An infant grows eight inches during the first year.

Only one couple in 11,500 live to celebrate their diamond wedding.

Ordinary sticking-plaster makes a good remedy for corns, as it keeps them soft and prevents the rubbing.

Old pots and kettles that have become stained or have an odour may be immersed in suds and boiled, when they will come out as good as new.

Sufferers from neuralgia are warned by a medical writer not to drink tea, but to drink freely of coffee into which the juice of a lemon has been squeezed.

Pimples indicate a bad condition of the blood, and the proper cure is to use such medicines and eat such food as will eliminate the diseased matter from the blood.

In Scotland during the early part of the 14th century a man could live sumptuously on sixpence a day; and with the addition of other three pennies could also keep a man-servant to attend him constantly.

When boiling mutton don't forget to make some good Scotch broth from the rich broth remaining in the kettle after taking the mutton out. Or if you boil or roast the mutton done brown, remove some of the broth while the mutton is cooking.

Hard-boiled egg sandwiches are much improved by the addition of a little water-cress, lettuce, or endive. Beetroot, water-cress, celery, tomatoes and mustard and cress make delicious sandwiches or portable salads. These are specially to be recommended to travellers, who, when tired of meat sandwiches (which, however daintily prepared, sometimes prove monotonous eating in a railway carriage,) will find the vegetables most refreshing and appetizing.

A delicious way of cooking finnan haddocks is to cook them on a "toaster" before a clear fire, or else in the oven, basting the fish in both cases with two or three ounces of butter broken into pieces from eight to ten minutes should cook them enough. Make an egg sauce dissolving half a cup of butter in a pan, stir in two finely-chopped hard-boiled eggs, dish the haddocks on a hot dish, add any butter they were cooked in to the egg sauce, and pour all over the dish.

A warm bath is always grateful to a sick child. The water should fully cover the person and feel pleasantly warm to the hand. As the little patient is lifted out, wrap it in a warm blanket and dry it under that with a warm towel. Put on a flannel night-dress or jacket over the cotton night-gown. If the attack is the beginning of an eruptive disease the bath will help to bring the eruption to the surface. An ailing child should not be allowed to sleep in the room with other children.

WIT AND WISDOM.

It isn't always the best man who gets the biggest gravestone.

The devil never has much trouble with people who get rich in a hurry.

When a handsome girl comes out her papa has to come down handsomely.

Man proposes, and—woman wishes he wouldn't be such a plaguey long time about it.

A man's shoes are considered clean when they are black. The same is not true of his face.

It is difficult to tell how much men are conciliated by a kind manner and gentle speech.—Cicero.

A dancing man may, if he likes, use his partner for a chair.

After all the people who seem really to enjoy life are the genuinely simple people who possess a solid faith.—Jacob.

Inquiring Child—"Why do people cry at weddings?" Papa (abstractedly)—"Most of 'em have been married themselves."

Wife—"Are you going fishing to-day?" Husband—"Yes, my dear." Wife—"Well try and catch some that are fresh this time."

Jessie—"Mamma, what does pro and con mean?" Flossie—"Why, I'm prised at your ignorance. It mean man and wife doesn't it mamma."

Inquisitive Scotch School Board Officer (to Hibernian parent)—"Was your boy born in Glasca?" "No, sir and I hope he never will be."

"Oh, if the kilt could speak! What a tale it would have to tell Of the wild and bloody battlefields Where our fathers swore they fell."

Never condemn your neighbor unheard every story has two ways of being told, and justice requires that you should hear the defence as well as the accusation.

That man only has learned to live rightly who takes with a smile the world's praise or blame, and with steady head and hand goes straight on with the work he has to do.

Coachman (driving fat old lady on a lonely road in a very high wind)—"Please, mum, will you 'old the 'orses while I run after my 'at? or you run after my 'at while I 'old the 'orses!"

Irate Passenger (as the train is moving off)—"Why didn't you put my luggage in as I told you?" Porter—"Eh, man! yer luggage is no sic a fule as yersel'. Ye're i' the wrang train!"

Disraeli is quoted as once saying—"When I meet a man whose name I cannot remember I give myself two minutes; then if it is a hopeless case, I always say, 'and how is the old complaint!'"

"You may sit in the stern of the boat and work the tiller, Miss Gaswell, if you think you can steer," said the young man as he took the oars. "I guess that won't be hard to do," responded the young heires. "I've often heard mamma say she crossed the ocean in the steerage."

Geordie was a noted character up Cairnie way. On one occasion he and the lady of his love were sitting on a style when they espied their master coming along the road. "Oh," said the fair one, "far will we gang, Geordie?" "Nae wye," replied Geordie. "Lat's steek our een and he'll never see's."

"How do you manage your husband so completely?" asked a friend of a lady a day or two ago. "Why, my dear," answered Mrs. B., "I adopt what I call the soothing plan. I never contradict him. For instance every day he says to me, 'I suppose you think I am an old fool,' and, my dear, I never contradict him!"

The Rev. Mr. Morrison, of Foula, who has been preaching in the North of Scotland, tells that on one occasion when a southerner was commiserating a native of Foula on being shut out from news from London during several months of the year, he was met with the naive reply, "Oo, ay, I wonder hoo the Londoners get on without hearing o' Foula."

FARM AND GARDEN.

A good clover sod turned under fits the ground to almost any other crop.

Of the 25,885 farms in Oregon 3,160 are provided with facilities for irrigation.

One of the most important requisites in keeping cattle for profit is to keep the right kind of cattle.

It is claimed that 75 per cent. of the damaged butter can be traced to filthy habits of the surroundings.

Young fowls are the best for laying eggs. It is not good to keep hens beyond the second year, except as breeders.

The Ontario Government crop report, just issued, states that the present condition points to a first-class crop of fall wheat.

There is not a very encouraging outlook in the butter-trade. The price is unusually low for so early a season of the year.

Oats, peas and barley ground and mixed together make a ration that is hard to beat for stock of all kinds, cows and hogs especially.

Some one asserts that the best floor for horses is made of a mixture of clay and coal ashes well beaten until it is firm and solid, and then filled with boiling hot tar.

In stormy weather, when the hens cannot get out of the houses much, the floor should be littered with straw or leaves, and a feed of dry grain scattered among the litter so as to make the scratch for it.

For thirty years we have noticed closely that those farmers who turn on to their pastures latest in the entire season. Not only that, but their pastures always produce a great deal the most feed.

A gentleman lately dismissed a clever but dishonest gardener. For the sake of his wife and his family he gave him a character, and this is how he worded it:—"I hereby certify that A. B. has been my gardener for over two years, and that during that time he has got more out of my garden than any man I ever employed."

There was a brisk time at a farm in Forfarshire the other day, when the farmer's wife presented her lord with a new son, the cow had a calf, the mare a foal, and the cat supplemented the list with a healthy crowd of kittens. The farmer, poor man, was as busy during the proceedings as a cow's tail at flytime.

THE MARCH OF IMPROVEMENT.

Art in the household and beauty in the ordinary surroundings of life was the gospel propounded by the late Professor Ruskin and other elevators of the human mind, and to realize what progress has been made in this direction it is well worth while paying a visit to the magnificent show rooms of the old established furniture house of Messrs.

OWEN MCGARVEY & SON

1849-1853 Notre Dame Street.

MONTREAL.

A walk through those spacious show rooms is a revelation; in fact they really amount in themselves to a Montreal Industrial exhibition in their line. Such must necessarily be the reflections of anyone who pays a visit to this firm's prominent establishment and makes a tour inspection through their attractive warerooms.

Everything in the furniture line is to be found there, from a two-piece chair to a fifteen hundred dollar bedroom set, and prices suit everyone.

No one need despair; the millionaire can furnish his house from top to bottom with the finest and most costly, and his junior clerk can fill his little tenement with useful and pretty articles at prices to suit his more limited means.

On entering the well-known and extensive warerooms on Notre Dame street, the visitor is struck by the excellent display of

Sideboards, Dining Tables, Hall Stands, Bookcases, Wardrobes

Library Tables, Writing Desks, and Easy and Combination Chairs and all descriptions.

PARLOR FURNITURE

meets the eye, such as 3, 4, 5, 6 and 7 piece parlor suites. Odd pieces, suites, gilt chairs, corner chairs, ottomans, divans, tete-a-tetes, piano and foot-stools in plushes, brocatelles and silk damasks of all the newest and latest shades; also a full line of fancy centre, card and work-table statuette-stands, ladies writing desks, music stands and easels.

On the third floor a fine selection of Rocking, Easy and Reclining Chairs claims particular attention. The celebrated bent wood furniture imported from Vienna, Austria, and of which the Messrs. McGarvey make a specialty, also occupies a prominent position on this floor.

On the fourth floor bedroom sets in profusion are to be found from the cheap ash wood to the elegantly carved set valued at fifteen hundred dollars. Brass and iron furniture, of which they have just received a very large consignment from Birmingham, England, is an especially noticeable feature; handsome solid brass bedsteads and pretty iron bedsteads as low as $5, and rising to much higher figures, are also to be found here. A great advantage in this house is that the price of every piece of furniture and article is marked in plain figures, but owing to the widening of Notre Dame street west, which will necessitate their removal next spring, they are now offering special inducements in the way of Discounts off the marked prices. The entire establishment is a model one, neatness and order prevailing everywhere; all available space is taken up to accommodate the enormous stock which they carry, and from which purchasers can select at their liberty but also a luxury in its way to carry their customers to any of their show rooms.

The firmly established reputation of this well-known house is a sufficient guarantee that outside show is only the last thing aimed at and that stability and good value for money are to be found in the established firm of Messrs.
