SUNDAY READING.

MY NAME IN MOTHER'S PRAYER.

T'was in the days of careless youth— When life was fair and bright, And ne'er a tear and scarce a fear...

A Disappointed Prodigal.

A tall, sturdy young man crossed the railroad ferry from Jersey City to New York on May 10th, and made his way up town to Fifteenth Street.

often comes to such men suddenly, giving them no opportunity for fulfilling their long-deferred intention. (II. Cor. 6: 2.)

Golden Thoughts for Every Day.

Monday—A great part of the education of every child consists of those impressions visual and other, which the senses of the little being are taking in visibly, though unconsciously, amid the scenes of their first exercise; and though all sorts of men are born in all sorts of places—poets in town and prosaic men amid fields and woody solitudes—yet, consistently with this, it is also true that much of the original capital on which all men tread intellectually though life consists of that mass of miscellaneous fact and imagery which they have acquired imperceptibly by the observations of their early years.

Tuesday— Thou Comforter, infinite, divine! Come, and in this poor heart shine; Cleanse thou me from all my sin; Make and keep me pure within.

Keep me by thy mighty power Every moment, day, and hour, Free from lust and sinful pride; Thou my hope, my life; my guide.

Illuminate my mind and heart; The Father's gracious will impart; That all I think and say and do May be holy, just and true.

And when my work of life is o'er, The breakers surge, the billows roar, Dispel the gloom, all doubts remove, My constant comforter still prove.

Wednesday—Place yourself often beneath the cross of Calvar, see that sight of love and; hear those words of wonder; look at the eternal Son humbling Himself there for you, and ask yourself, as you gaze fixedly on Him, whether he whose only hope is in that cross of absolute self-sacrifice and self-abasement can dare to cherish in himself one self-complacent action.

Thursday—The wise man has his follies, no less than the fool; but it has been said that herein lies the difference—the follies of the fool are known to the world, but are hidden from himself; the follies of the wise are known to himself, but hidden from the world.

Friday—Would our King tell us again and again "Fear not!" if there were any reason to fear? Would He say this kind word again and again, ringing changes as of the bells of heaven, upon it only to mock us if He knew all the time that we could not possible help fearing?

Saturday— Our changeable lives are ebbing to an end Onward to darkness and to death we tend; O Conqueror of the grave be thou our guide, Be thou our light in death's dark eventide; Then in our mortal hour will be no gloom No sting in death, no terror in the tomb.

Thou who in darkness walking didst appear Upon the waves, and Thy disciples cheer, Come, Lord, in lonesome days, when storms assail, And earthly hopes and human succors fail; When all is dark may we behold Thee high, And hear Thy voice—"Fear not, for it is I."

THE ARIZONA KICKER.

A Disastrous Conflagration Written up in Sickingen Thud Style. DISASTROUS CONFLAGRATION.—Friday night at about 11 o'clock we were aroused from our slumbers by the fearful cry of "Fire!" uttered by a voice which evidently belonged to a bald-headed, bow-legged, cantankerous old critter.

SOLID AGAIN.—Sunday morning last some of the Clinch Valley cowboys heard that we were over that way on a visit to Col. Brill, and about twenty of them had laid for us. They got sight of a naturalist from Chicago, who was after a collection of insects, and ran after him seven miles before they discovered their error.

NOT THE MAN.—Our horse editor, who is an impetuous young journalist from the east, published an item during our absence last week which severely reflected on the social standing of our esteemed fellow-townsmen, Capt. John Tarbell.

WE now beg to humbly announce that a great injustice was done to the gallant Captain. He never killed a man in Pennsylvania, and instead of jumping the town he was playing poker in the Red Star saloon when the paper was issued.

WE are trying to give a sort of Twentieth-century flavor to our paper by employing Eastern journalists who happen along, but we confess to being somewhat discouraged. They don't exactly grasp the Western situation with both hands.

SULLIVAN'S TALL STORY.

Ingeniously Inhuman Conduct with Which He Charges a Farmer.

Ten days ago Henry Sullivan, a prosperous farmer and cattle raiser of Forsythe, Mo., left home to go to a neighboring town, where he purposed buying a number of cattle. Since that time nothing was heard of him until to-day, when he walked into his home looking so haggard, unkempt, and disreputable that no one recognized him.

Some time ago, in making a deal with Charles Wilson, a farmer, Sullivan got the best of him to the extent of several thousand dollars. This so preyed upon Wilson, an eccentric bachelor, that he determined upon a fiendish revenge. In a deep cañon near the road which Sullivan travelled was a large cave which no one had ever explored, and which was reputed to be the den of ferocious wild animals and venomous reptiles.

It was not his captor's plan to kill him at once. He was to die by inches. Each day he visited Sullivan, bringing with him just food enough to prolong life and to make his sufferings a thousand times worse than the agony of death. What Sullivan suffered, he says, can never be told. It was worse than the torments of hell. His fiendish captor would bring heaped-up dishes of food, and placing it just beyond his reach, would gloat over his agony.

A Woman With a Hairpin. "What a woman can do with a hairpin" is thus amusingly set forth in a Scottish paper: "A woman can do more with a hairpin than a man can do with any one instrument in existence. She takes it to button her boots, to crimp her hair, to fasten her hat on, to button her gloves and the waist buttons of her dress, and to pin her veil. She can use it as a paperknife or a book-mark; to open a letter or to draw a device upon a seal.

A Wonderful Set of Chessmen.

A remarkable set of chessmen has just been completed by an American mechanic. The pieces are made of silver bronze, and the period of costume and equipment is A. D. 1191, all the characters being historical and contemporary and strictly accurate in every detail of heraldic blazonry and costume. The knights are in chain-mail armor, with shield, axe, sword and dagger. Their fur coats have each the individual blazon of the wearer. The queens wear royal robes and carry sceptres. The bishops are in church vestments, with cross and crozier. The pawns are men at arms in a kneeling posture, with spear, bill-hook and knife.

Grow Straight Trees.

The tendency of fruit trees to grow one-sided, and larger on the north than on the south side, is very remarkable in some places. At the South Dakota experiment station, the orchard was pruned twice during the season by pinching back the new growth on the north side. The best method was found to be in pinching back the tips of the branches on the north side, thus permitting the branches on the south side to catch up with, or even surpass, the north side. It is important to keep the south side of the tree heavier, as it thus shades the trunk and larger branches, thereby preventing sun scald. If all superfluous branches are rubbed or pinched off as soon as they make their appearance, the tree has not to expend superfluous energy, will mature better and last longer.

A Feline Chicken Fancier.

A citizen of Portland, Ind., claims to be the owner of a large tomcat who long ago developed a great love for the companionship of the poultry tribe. "It eats everything they do, even to shelled corn, and when night comes perches itself on the roost alongside of a rooster as contented as if it were with those of its own kind."

THE MARCH OF IMPROVEMENT.

Art in the household and beauty in the ordinary surroundings of life was the gospel propounded by the late Professor Ruskin and his followers. Elevators of the human mind, and to realize what progress has been made in this direction it is well worth while paying a visit to the magnificent show rooms of the old established furniture house of Messrs.

OWEN MCGARVEY & SON 1849-1853 Notre Dame Street MONTREAL.

A walk through those spacious show rooms is a revelation; in fact they really amount in themselves to a Montreal Industrial exhibition of their line. Such must necessarily be the reflections of anyone who pays a visit to this firm's prominent establishment and makes a thorough inspection through their attractive warerooms.

Everything in the furniture line is to be found there, from a five cent chair to a fifteen hundred dollar bedroom set, and priced suit everyone. No one need despair; the millionaire can furnish his house top to bottom with the finest and most costly, and his junior clerk fill his little tenement with useful and pretty articles at prices to his more limited means.

On entering the well-known and extensive warerooms on Notre Dame street, the visitor is struck by the excellent display of Sideboards, Dining Tables, Hall Stands, Bookcases, Wardrobes, Library Tables, Writing Desks, and Easy and Combination Chairs of all descriptions.

On reaching the second floor a beautiful assortment of PARLOR FURNITURE meets the eye, such as 3, 4, 5, 6 and 7 piece parlor suites. Odd chairs, gilt chairs, corner chairs, ottomans, divans, tete-a-tetes, piano foot-stools in plushes, brocatelles and silk damasks of all the latest and latest shades; also a full line of fancy centre, card and work-table statuette-stands, ladies writing desks, music stands and easels.

On the third floor a fine selection of Rocking, Easy and Reclining Chairs claims particular attention. The celebrated bent wood furniture imported from Vienna, Austria, and of which the Messrs. McGarvey make a specialty, also occupies a prominent position on this floor.

On the fourth floor bedroom sets in profusion are to be found at the cheap ash wood to the elegantly carved set valued at fifteen hundred dollars. Brass and iron furniture, of which they have just received a very large consignment from Birmingham, England, is an especially noticeable feature; handsome solid brass bedsteads and pretty iron bedsteads as low as $5, and rising to much higher figures also are found here. A great advantage in this house is that the price of every piece of furniture and article is marked in plain figures.

owing to the widening of Notre Dame street west, which will necessitate their removal next spring, they are now offering special inducements in the way of Discounts off the marked prices. The entire establishment is a model one, neatness and order prevailing everywhere; all available space is taken up to accommodate the enormous quantities which they carry, and from which purchasers can select at their leisure. Their new passenger elevator will be found not only a great convenience but also a luxury in its way to carry their customers to any of their show rooms.

The firmly established reputation of this well-known house of sufficient guarantee that outside show is only the last thing aimed at and that stability and good value for money are to be found in the established firm of Messrs.
