

WHY IT PAYS TO TRADE WITH US.

DUNDAS & FLAVELLE BROS.

Reason it in this way: Visiting personally the best markets of the Old World, and buying direct from the manufacturers of Great Britain, France and Germany, for spot cash, and then giving our customers the advantage of all this, does it not make matters plain.

Try us for your next parcel. If Mantles, we have nearly 1000 to choose from. If Suits then over 1000 to choose from. If Dress, then many thousand yards to select from. Try us for something, as a matter of comparison, let it be Cotton, Linen, Flannels, Carpets, House furnishings, Hosiery, &c., any of them, and then we will leave it to you to judge the advantage of trading with us.

New Bakery.

I have pleasure in announcing to the citizens of Lindsay, that I will on Thursday, Nov. 3rd, commence a bakery where all kinds of bread will be sold at 10c per 4 lb loaf and delivered to any part of the town. All kinds of cake and pastry. Wedding cake a specialty. I have succeeded in the face of a determined opposition in supplying bread at a reasonable rate, and successfully foiled the efforts of a couple of bakers of this town in their attempt to prevent me from procuring bread for my customers from Peterboro, and from obtaining the premises for baking my own supply in future. I have secured the service of a first-class baker. The public will now have an opportunity of procuring good bread at a fair price, and of patronising those who have done their best in their interest. W. E. MURPHY, 99 Kent-st., two doors East of the post office.

The Saturday Blade

Is the greatest newspaper wonder of the age. It is four years old and has a circulation of over a quarter million copies a week. The latest sensations and the most marvellous events are written up in the best style and fully illustrated. Subscriptions received at $2.00 per year, $1.00 for six months, or 50 cents for three months. Special inducements to clubs. Send for free specimen copies. Boys everywhere are making big money selling the Blade on the streets. Write for particulars. Address the publisher, W. D. Boyce, 113, 115 and 117 Fifth avenue, Chicago.

Fighting Without Firearms.

The Greek pike was 24 feet long. The medieval lance was 18 feet. The Swiss pike was 18 feet long. The Roman javelin was 6 feet long. The petrary was a medieval catapult. Plate armor was used from 1410 to 1600. The standard Roman sword was 22 inches. The helmet of Richard I. weighs 25 pounds. The rabbi say Cain killed Abel with a club. David slew Goliath with a sling stone, B. C. 1063. German helmets were ornamented with cow-horns. The cross-bow came into use in the twelfth century. The military flail came into use in the tenth century. Spears are found in the earliest hieroglyphics of Egypt. The first armor used was of skins and padded hides. The pulley-drawn cross-bow had a range of forty rods. Projecting engines were first invented by the Greeks. Mixed chain and plate armor was used from 1300 to 1410. Gustavus Adolphus abolished all armor but a light cuirass. The French infantry were armed with the pike until 1640. The battles of Crecy, Poitiers and Agincourt were won by the archers.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN.

GOSSIP ABOUT THE FAIR SEX CULLED FROM ALL SOURCES.

Attractiveness Created by Good Reading—Modjeska and Her Cigarette—Success of the Woman Manager.

It is born in every woman to wish to be as attractive as possible. Men call it vanity, but that term is erroneous, for such a sentiment is only fostered by the compliments of others, the flattering minor and that tend toward that end. Vanity is self-satisfaction, but the desire to be attractive only proves that a woman is not entirely pleased with herself, but wishes for a polishing and brightening up and making the most of what she has to the best advantage, instead of a sense of content that bespeaks her own good opinion of her perfections. When a girl adopts a plan of self-improvement she begins usually with her complexion or her figure, but the Philadelphia Times in confidence betrays a beauty secret that deals not in cosmetics or lotions, that does not tend to injure the skin or fatigue the body, yet which adds more genuine loveliness to a woman's heart and mind than all the contents of the little jars and cut glass bottles on my lady's toilet table could ever hope to effect.

This wonderful attraction giver is the cultivation of a taste for good reading. Nothing so influences the manners and morals of the woman of any age as the books she reads. Trashy novels with flamed-lined plots fire the imagination, but do not tend to elevate the mind. Life viewed through pages of a lurid, blood-curdling volume assumes an aspect entirely at variance with its real character and the constant reader of such a style becomes imbued with ideas that may, unless she has some wonderfully powerful influence pulling the other way, lead her to do many things that in the future she may regret. Become a cultivated reader. Seek out the best, whether poetry, fiction or history, and you may depend upon it that such a course will do more towards making you a charming and delightful companion for those who appreciate the beauty of intellect than the fleeting power of a beauty that is not backed by brains.

Modjeska and Her Cigarette.

"All the people are asking me how I keep looking so young, as if, indeed, I were old. I am not old, I am never going to be old," said Mme. Modjeska to the New York Sun man. "I'll tell you a story just to show you what kind of stock I come from. When my mother was 75 we bought her some good warm flannels, such as other old ladies wear, and put them on her. She wore them a day. At night she cried and would have them taken off. 'Why,' she said, 'if I wear those woolly things now, what will I wear when I am old?' That's the blood that's in me. I don't believe in codding and fussing about myself. If I do not grow old as fast as other women it is because I have no time to worry about getting old. I am not anxious about my charms or my clothing, nor do I bother with lotions for my complexion. It might be better if I did. I have a hot bath every night before I go to bed, a good night's sleep, a light breakfast, a simple but hearty dinner at 2 o'clock, a bit of bread and tea for lunch at 5, and a supper after the play, with a good cup of tea. You Americans would say Mme. Modjeska was killing herself, if you knew how much tea and coffee I drink, and see a cigarette always with my dinner," and she took the lighted cigarette from her husband, blowing out rings of smoke with a dainty grace and mischievous smile. "I always like to have people smoke with me," she added, "for you know if you eat salt with an Arab or smoke with a Pole you are forever a loyal friend."

A London Restaurant Bill.

The detailed bills which one receives at hotels and restaurants are often worth keeping as curiosities. Here is a transcript of one received in a restaurant not far from London. It consists of a thin slip of paper, seven inches long by two and a half inches wide, with the name of the restaurant at the top and a printed list of sixteen articles which may be ordered, shillings and pence; the figures here given are pence:

Joint..... 10
Cheese and butter..... 1
Bread..... 1
Liquors and aerated waters..... 1
Attendance..... 6
To get a napkin in that eating-house one had to order it just as he would any article which he wished to eat, otherwise he would go without. The most curious thing here, however, is the item "liquors and aerated waters." No one could ever guess that this was designed to cover a cup of tea. No tea was provided for in the bill, and the waitress evidently thought it wise to take a title sufficiently inclusive.

The Pleasure and Economy of Canoeing.

There is so much that is attractive in the modern canoe that it would be hard to select its chief point of utility or beauty. The modern canoe is almost as light as, if not lighter than, the birch bark canoe of the prehistoric Indian. It is constructed of polished wood that attracts the eye irresistibly because of its warmth of color, as well as its beauty of construction. Its lightness renders the canoe easy to sail in winds where many yachts would barely move, while under the strokes of a gleaming paddle it shoots a head in a marvellously swift fashion. It can be carried across portages in the forest; it can be hauled up on the shore easily, and its sail makes the tent which covers the sleeping canoeist at night as he rests in the soundest repose in his craft after each day's sail.

With a good canoe a vacationist often makes the round of the New England watering places without paying out money for hotel bills. His craft by day is his house by night, and the village stores along the coast supply his provisions. In fact, the life of a canoeist is such an ideally delightful and healthy one that his spare moments must be usually spent in wonder that the rest of the world is so slow to adopt canoeing as its favorite means of recreation.—Boston Advertiser.
