GLIMPSES FROM REV. J. W. MAC-MILLAN'S LECTURE ON FRIDAY NIGHT.

CHURCHES-THE POPULATION -THE WAR-THE POLITICS-THE SLUMS.

As the boat sails up the river, you have leisure to review the shipping. You are in one of the world's great harbors, where they that go down to the sea in ships have their exits and their entrances. Two thirds of the commerce of the United States is before you. Here are tugs g-lore, travelling light and swift, or puffing and panting as they tow huge scows or lofty vessels. Here and there is a cruiser or a battleship, black and dangerous looking, for the white paint of peace has been exchanged for the sombre colors of war. There is a millionaire's yacht, low and dainty, with lines which declare speed and decorations which show luxury. An Atlantic liner, some monster grey K Vanderbilt, $25,000,000; G. Pullman, who is "able to save to the utterm st." hound of the Cunard or White Star line, The flowers cost $10,000; Mrs. W. K. makes its ponderous way to the dock where the cabties and customs officers are Vanderbilt's dress the same; the supper waiting. Hundreds of nondescript crafts | $20,000 and the jewellry there was worth them-bright stock-good size-30 propelled by every sort of sail or engine, $1,500,000. Next day the papers told crowded with merchandise of every part about it, and in the column alongside A LARGE AND HAPPY GATHERINGof the globe, are tied at the wharves or were recorded deaths by suicide, by carefully picking their way to and from insanity, by starvation; the deaths of men them. Everything is silent, self possessed, and women who had tried in vain to get wondered why so many people were business-like. It is after you board the horse-cars and go jingling along the stone-horse-cars and go jingling horse-cars and go jingling along the stonepaved street to hunt a boarding house that the noise of the city breaks upon you.

In a block or two you reach Ninth-ave. The elevated railway trains go rattling One way to try and find out what overhead. The huge wagons bang and grate on the cobble-stones.
