THE LINDSAY CREAMERY

The adjourned meeting of the patrons or rather shareholders of the proposed sample, and you can judge for yourself system in the county goal, to have the Victoria County Creamery was held in the council chamber on Saturday after. noon last. The attendance was not in keeping with the importance of the meeting, and had a somewhat depressing effect upon those present. While nearly all present favored going ahead at once they hesitated to assume the responsibilities of doing so. A great deal of time was then taken up in expressing regret at the absence of leading farmers who should take a deep interest in the scheme. Several of the speakers pointed out that it the meeting decided to go on they would be indorsed by the absent stockholders and the farming public generally. It was finally moved by Mr. E. Thurston, sectractor's hands or Sept. 3rd and payment onded by Mr. J. D. O'Brien, and carried unanimous'y that we proceed with the creamery. The question of tenders was the next order of business, and a commitee consisting of Mesars. E. Thurs'on, should pay a portion of the cost equal to Capt. Hunter, E. Shine, A. Robertson, the estimated cost of the extension which r. Ciancy, Geo Payne, Geo. Lytle and the committee was authorized to make, the president Mr. W. Flavelle and Vice President D. Scully be appointed to award the tenders. The tenders, some half-dezen in number, were then opened, after which the meeting adjourned. The committee met on Tuesday and after comparing them decided to lay the tenders before the whole company when the following motion was passed: Moved by Mr. J. WINTER CELERY.

When and How to Store It - Late Growth and Keeping.

It is well to bear in mind that unblanched celery will withstand several degrees of frost without any bad effect, but blanched celery is very susceptible to frost. For this reason it should be stored much earlier than the other, which had better be left out until near Thanksgiving, or as late as possible, according to the weather outlook. The best time to put it in is from Oct. 20 to Nov. 20, according to latitude and section of country. To the foregoing timely suggestion from a correspondent of American Gardening is added the following from the same journal:

After testing the various methods of storing celery for winter use I am convinced that, for my own purpose at least, the one I herewith describe is best. I use Giant Pascal and New Rose for winter, and plant three rows close together (six or seven inches apart), and the plants about the same distance apart in the rows. The ground is heavily manured before planting and the plants are kept well watered and cultivated. They are given but one slight earthing up until slight frosts set in. Stakes are then driven in along the two outside rows, giving the tops a slight inclination toward the central row, and having the tops of the stakes about level with the tops of the celery. Earth is then banked up about two-thirds of the heights of the plants and made firm. A ten inch board is then set against the stakes on each side, and the earth is banked to a level with the top of the boards. Two more boards are nailed together at right angles to one another, and these are placed over the top. Some straw is placed alongside of the rows and is put over the boards during a sharp freeze. In mild weather both straw and boards are removed entirely. This is all the protection that will be needed until severe winter weather sets in, when the whole bank may be covered with leaves, straw and litter of any kind. The point that appeals most strongly to my fancy is the opportunity of making what is essential to late keep- P.S.-Filling Letter Orders a Specialty. ing celery-viz, a late growth.

Fertilizer For Leguminous Plants. Leguminous plants, such as vetch, clover, cowpeas, etc., when amply supplied with tubercles, need no nitrogenous fertilizers, but are highly responsive to acid phosphate and potash salts. These plants make heavy demands on the mineral plant food of the oil.

Device For Cutting Corn Fodder. The sketch of a device for cutting corn fodder for feeding originally appeared in the Ohio Farmer. A correspondent says: Where one wants to feed a team of horses or a cow or two, it is all that is needed. The space between the ends of the floor boards (A) and the crosspiece (B) should be 11/2 inches wide, for the hay knife to work

Make the box wide enough for a person to stand in by the side of a bundle of fodder. Place the bundle in the box butts foremost, put one foot on it and cut in lengths to suit-I cut 4 to 8 inches-until you come to the band, then reverse the bundle and cut from the top.
