WOODVILLE

Special to the Watchman.
KEEP THIS DATE IN MIND.—Dentist at Queen's hotel, Friday, 9th inst. ST. ANDREW'S SUPPER was duly celebrated in this place on St. Andrew's day. About a hundred guests assembled from far and near and mine host Nealon of the Queen's hotel deserves credit for the repast he provided. After the soup, fowl and pastry had been disposed of, and after all superfluous dishes had been removed from the table, the haggis, fresh from the land of the heather, was brought on in the time honored way. The president repaired to the kitchen, and headed by a piper brought in the dainty dish steaming and highly seasoned. This disposed of, the large assemblage listened to patriotic songs, and then the younger people present aided their digestion with dancing. The Messrs. Lunan of Cambridge furnished the music, and the weird strains of the pibroch added much to the enjoyment of the occasion. Mr. Henderson, organizer of the Sons of Scotland, was present. He interpreted the Gaelic message of welcome and varied the program with several Scotch step dances.

ACCIDENT.—Mrs. Spence mother of Mr. John Spence, south of Woodville met with a painful accident a few days ago. She lives with her son, and when about to step out of the house after one of the slight snow storms, she missed her footing, seriously breaking her ankle. Her extreme age makes it more serious.

VERY ILL.—Mr. Duncan McDougall, father of Mr. D. McDougall of the Lindsay public school, is seriously ill. Little hope is entertained of his recovery. Many years ago he was stricken with paralysis, and a few days ago he had a second stroke. Since then his life has been despaired of. Mr. McDougall is one of the pioneers of North Mariposa. Very few of the first settlers are now living.

CHURCH.—The Rev. Mr. McKinnon, who recently resigned his pastorate of the Fenelon Falls Presbyterian church, occupied the Presbyterian church pulpit last Sunday evening. Rev. Mr. Terrill of Norland conducted the service at the Methodist church.

SNOW AND SLEIGHING.—When the residents crawled out on Monday morning they found the sidewalks covered with snow to the depth of three feet in many places. The officials had the snow plow promptly at work, and by noon the streets were again passable. Sleighs and cutters are now the order of the day. The roads are in good condition.

FASHION NOTES.

Details With Regard to the Fashionable Winter Wardrobe.

The bodies differing from the skirt seems to have come to stay, for, although it is no longer the extreme of fashion and is not seen in the most elegant and formal costumes, it yet has its own place in the fashionable wardrobe. For the house and the theater it is much worn, and many of attractive examples are shown this season in wool, silk and velvet. It is hardly necessary to mention the shirt waists of velveteen, corduroy and wash flannels which are so largely used for morning wear. They are cut after the same pattern as cambric shirt waists, and may be worn with the usual linen collar and masculine necktie or with a stock.

Colored hosiery has not yet regained its old place in public favor. Formerly it was worn upon all occasions; now it is reserved for house and evening wear. Black hosiery is preferred for out of doors unless

CALLING COSTUME.

The shoes are tan or brown, in which case the stockings may match them, although this is not essential, black stockings being often worn with colored shoes.

Plain linen collars and those which are hemstitched and embroidered are in high favor.

The illustration shows a costume of green cashmere cloth and silk. The cloth skirt has a circular flounce and is trimmed with two bands of black velvet application on white cloth. The bodice is completely plaited, back and front, and is of silk, as are the sleeves, which are plaited transversely above the elbow. Applications of black velvet on white cloth outline a corselet, and form bands and cuffs on the sleeves. The collar is of green silk, the belt of white cloth with black velvet bands. The toque of great velvet is trimmed with green ribbon, black feathers and a jeweled buckle.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

VARIOUS NOTES.

Hints With Regard to the Prevailing Modes in Millinery and Fur.

The small and somewhat audacious three cornered hats which have attained such a vogue in Paris should be worn with a tailor made costume or other elegant but simple woollen gown, as they are quite out of harmony with frills and fur-trimmed gowns. A novelty in hat trimming is the little box of fringed ostrich plume which encircles the cravat in the place of the usual band or torsade of satin or velvet. Galloon edged with plume is employed in the same manner.

It is difficult to tell whether satin or velvet is most in favor for trimming. They are often combined in millinery decoration. Draperies, choix and Louis knots are the adornments chiefly used.

Fur is to be more worn than ever this winter. It is treated in many different ways and employed in fashions which would once have seemed impossible. For example, circular flounces of fur are seen on the models of some of the newest and most costly gowns, a way of cutting and trimming which involves much expense. The high priced furs are always the most fashionable of course, and when they are cut in any peculiar way they are no longer useful when that special style has disappeared, and so they cannot be worn for successive years, as one naturally expects to wear costly furs.

Today's illustration shows a cape of silver gray cloth. It is decorated with lines of stitching, ornamentally arranged, and is lined with marten fur. There is a high, flaring collar lined with fur and fur revers which form coquilles at the top. The bottom of the cape is finished by a circular ruffle and the cape is closed at the throat by a motif of pearl gray passementerie.
