Diptheria.

It is with regret we have to record a victum to this dread disease in our midst in the young daughter of Mr. Alex. Dobson, who died on Friday last. The care. lessness on the part of the officials both at Cannington and here are largely to blame for the condition of affairs here, and should more deaths result, it might almost be said the blame will lay with them. The Government has provided a most excellent Body in the Local Boards of Health, but in this village at least, the institution has been trifled with and treated with a marked contempt. In the appointment of the Board for 1886 let the Council see that the members do their duty according to law or else it will devolve on the citizens themselves to take the matter in hand and see to it which had given him that brightness of that proper precautions against undue carelessness be taken. In this connection the Peterborough "Times" speaking of Diptheria says: " It being very infectious, the greatest precautions must courage asceticism, it does not refuse the be observed. Whenever the throat is good things which God has provided, it felt to become sore, a gargle of sulphur | brings severity into no man's experience | Division Court. and water is, we are informed on the best medical authority, a sure preventi- | not remove a good thing from our table tive from further trouble.

Regular Meetings Wanted.

The Gravenhurst "Banner" invites the Council of that village to establish regular times of meeting so that the ratepayers may know when and how to meet the town fathers. This would be a good move for our Council and we would suggest the Councillors of the village consider the matter.

Sermon.

Rev. Mr. Patterson, Knox Church continued his sermons to young men on the best and cheapest in the market at Sabbath evening last by a very interesting and instructive resume of the life and character of the Prophet Daniel. The subject was a very appropriate and dignified one and well fitted to illustrate the valuable treths set forth by the meaker. Taking his text from Daniel 11. b. 5th verse, the Rev. gentleman remurked the fact that a man's public carner days not indicate the man. It is only as conduct is traced to motives and as motives discover character that we can come to impartial conclusions.

Woodville Foral Bews. A public career necessarily conceals character to a great extent and human biographies fail to reveal it, but when we come to the Bible men are seen as they really were, nothing is suppressed beginning was doubtless the fruit of early training. In the home of his childhood he had learned of the true God and that was the best possible preparation for life and the fact of his being a captive and as such forced to live on the poorest fare was also regarded as one of the stepping stones to his future greatness. He was a temperate man and a total abstainer from wine and although invited to eat at to continue the modest diet of a captive of their childred and claimed their direct responsibility to God for their child-as this training applies to the church it will also re-act in a large measure on secular affairs. Returning to Daniel's habits, the Rev. speaker said: nothing will give better results than a simple diet without alcohol, hygienically, speak-the wisdom of being temperate in all thin

Temperance as a habit of life, not temperance in any restricted sense as for example, confined to intoxicating liquors, but as touching and regulating the whole life. It is quite possible to be temperate in one respect and most intemperate in others. Self-indulgence will manifest itself in moral as well as physical weakness. The purity of innocence retained is better than that which comes by repentance and pardon. The guilt of sinful induigence may be removed through repentance and faith but its memory even the blood of Christ cannot destroy.

The life to which appetite and passion

These entertaining young fellows and would-be benedicts have no time to go courting themselves, and so much of that sort is done by proxy. They are entirely too busy amassing fortunes, either at sheep herding, cattle growing or mining, in which at least 50 per cent. of them are bound to become millionaires sooner or later. In purchasing furs a sure test of what dealers call a "prime" fur is the length and density of the down next the skin. This can be readily determined by blowing a brisk current of air from the mouth "against the set of fur." If the fibre opens readily, exposing the skin to views reject the article: but if the down is so dense that the breath cannot penetrate it, or, at most, shows but a small portion of the skin, the article may be accepted.

The Newspapers Excel.

Some years ago the tar bucket and whitewash brush were much in vogue as advertising mediums, but lately they have been used only to advertise liver pads and corn cures. Some of the old legends still traceable present some queer combinations. A dauber would scrawl something like this on a fence: GO TO LIMEBUCKSAW & cOYS FOR CHEEPE GOOSEBERRYS. In a short time a breachy steer or a high wind or something would knock down the fence and the boards would fix it this way: GO TO LY MYSHONG IME COYS FOR edt flad one cheere cooreners money which it costs to cover 20 miles of road with signs that nobody reads, if spent judiciously in printer's ink, would insure a good return in increased patronage. #### Hannibal Ham!in and His Brother.

Upon being carried back by some casual remark to his boyhood days, Mr. Hamlin to'd me how he accounted for his having grown up at variance, politically, with the other members of his family. Said he: "When we lived in Paris father took the Portland Gazette and the Eastern Argus, both weekly papers. I think the mail came orce a week then. I used to go to the postoffice for the mail and bring home both of these papers. Father was a whig, and he used to sit down in the evening and read the Gazette through first. While he was reading the Gazette I used to read the Argus. I did this week after week, and suppose the Argus gave me a democratic cant. My brother Elijah was a very strong whig, but he and I always got along well together, because we agreed never to talk politics, and we kept our agreement. I ran for congress in this district, and he voted against me three times. When he ran for governor I voted against him. In 1856 we came together in the republican party, and I'll tell you when and where it was. They held a massmeeting here in Bangor and Elijah presided. He introduced me to the audience, and I began my speech in this way. 'Brother! We meet to-day for the first time in our lives on the same political platform. I give you the right hand of fellowship.' Did'nt they howl, though!" And the venerable statesman's eyes flashed as he recalled the exciting event. He said he could repeat a large part of that speech. "The campaign of 1356," he added, "was by far the most exciting of any in which I participated. I made ninety-nine speeches in that campaign. If I had known it before it was over I would have made one more." "How many times did you speak in the last campaign?" Twenty. I believe." "Not a bit.

I got excited sometimes, though, I tell you. - Lewiston (Me.) Journal.
