Signs of an Open Winter.

Has it ever struck the reader as a fact that following a season when the corn husks are thin and light, comes an open winter. When the husks are heavy and hard to separate from the ear, then a hard winter may be expected. Farmers say that last summer the corn husks were quite thin and easily removed. Another sign of an open winter is the movements of the muskrats. When lots of cold and snow and ice are coming this knowing little animal in November begins to build its house. No muskrats have been observed at these operations this year, and none of their houses are to be seen in the marshes.

Have You Seen It.

The picture, "Suffer Little Children to Come Unto Me," offered by the Montreal "Witness" to their daily and weekly subscribers, is a work reproduced in oil colors with great richness and beauty and it is a wonder to all who receive it how the publishers can offer so much at so small a cost. The leading judges of art in the Dominion all testify to its beauty as a work of art, their testimonies having been published in the "Witness."

The Christmas number contained three chronos each of which were worth the price asked for the number.

Knox Church.

Tuesday last was an important and solemn occasion to the congregation of the above church being the occasion of the induction of their new pastor, Rev. D. C. Johnson. At the formal ceremony in the afternoon a large audience was present and also a number of the members of the Presbytery of Lindsay. Rev. Dr. McTavish, of Lindsay, delivered a very impressive address to both the congregation and pastor. The social in the evening was well attended, considering the inclemency of the weather, and was excellently appointed. The after programme was ably sustained. Rev. Robt. Gunn, acted as chairman and the speakers were Rev. Mr. McDonald of Uxbridge, Rev. Mr. McKee, Rev. Mr. McLaren, of Canington, Mr. J. H. McGillvary, of Uxbridge, with a short address from Rev. Mr. Johnson. The choir provided excellent music in the selections given while several tasty solos were also rendered. Altogether a very pleasant evening was spent. The children's social on Wednesday evening was also well attended and the little folk enjoyed themselves immensely.
