A FAMOUS ESTABLISHMENT.

Special Correspondence.

NEW YORK, Feb. 19, 1887. - We recently availed ourselves of an invitation extended to several medical gentlemen to visit the celebrated Laboratory of Dr. H. Root, the noted specialist upon Epilepsy, in New York city, where his specific remedy for Epilepsy "Elepizone," is prepared. It is at the junction of Cedar and Pearl streets—New York city-the main office being at 182 Pearl street.

The Consulting Room is a large and richly furnished apartment-admirably adapted to medical purposes. It is one of the most completely furnished Laboratories in the country.

His valuable Library, comprising over 2,500 volumes, includes the standard works and publications of the most celebrated physicians and surgeons of this, and foreign countries, each work having been carefully selected for its special reference and exhaustive treatise upon the disease "Epilepsy," in the treatment of which Dr. Root has so signally distinguised himself in the ranks of his profession. gulsed himself in the ranks of his profession.

A distinctive feature of Dr. Root's system is the privilege accorded to each employe of the Laboratory, of free access to this valuable medical collec-

Another striking feature in the Consulting Room is the electrical apparatus whereby instant communication can be established with any member whose presence is desired. By Telephonic connection with an adjoining Telegraph office, the Doctor places him-self in communication with the managers of his Branch Laboratories in Toronto and London, whereby maintaining a direct superintendency over his entire business the world over, two very essential elements in a successful and extended practice.

From this room we enter the General office-where the tutmost activity prevails, yet entirly devoid of bustle or confusion-a result of that systematic action which regulates the management of the entire establishment. Here, the extensive mail matter is received, lits orders, applications for medicine, and general correspondence assorted and assigned to the special departments, the cases for treatment carefully arranged, classified, and prepared for the Doctor's special study and opinion—each case being personally diagnosed by him before final action is taken there-

It may here be appropriately remarked that the recent decision of several large firms, to divide their yearly profits with their employes, is an adoption of a long-established custom of this office—Dr. Root having long advocated this mutual co-operation, and fully illustrated its advantage by the very comfortable circumstances of his employes.

Passing into the Printing Department-wherein the enormous supply of Circulars, Treatises, and other printed matter pertaining to his remedy are prepared, and through the mailing, packing and shipping rooms, each of which is fully provided with all the conveniences of safety and dispatch, we come to the Laboratory, where an idea af the magnitude of the business is obtained.

Huge steaming boilers, which reduce the vegetable ingredients of the Elepizone to a liquid form: compact sweating boxes, that extract certain curative properties from other peculiar medicinal herbs; long rows of percolators, vast cooling tanks, long relays of receptacles for the preparation, preparatory to bot-tling, together with the numerous scientific and ingenious apparatus employed, attest the care, skill, and profound study and research of the originator of this wonderful process, by which thousands of Epileptics have been Cured for Life.

A glance at the shipping book for 1886 shows that 13.785 bottles of this Infalliable Remedy for Epilepsy was sent to Physicians, alone, for their individual practice, while the Druggists sold 53,207 bottles, and to Patients treated during the same year, 295,236, making a total of 362,228 bottles of Elepizone. If this great remedy did not have merit it could not "get there" in such great quantities. The immediate advantages of Dr. Root's specific method of treatment hes in its originality, effectiveness, and cheapness to the patient, placing a cure within the reach of all. A Free Triat Bottle is first sent to those who apply, and a carefully prepared statement of the case is then required from the patient. From this the case is thoroughly diagnosed by the Doctor, and the patient treated as successfully by mail as by a personal consultation.
