One Saturday night last month Edward Pummel of Castleford, England, returned home drunk and, it is alleged, ill used his wife, who was found dead next morning with a newly-born child crying by her side. The coffee, tobacco and sugar crops in Vera Cruz are being ravaged by swarms of locusts, which have come from Yucatan. It is feared that they will extend through Tamaulipas into Texas. A farmer named Resheaw, living in the township of Anderson, while quarrelling with his son on Monday, struck him on the head and knocked him senseless. A fatal result is feared. The tents of "the Grande Kermesse" in Place d'Armes Square, Montreal, collapsed during a thunderstorm on Tuesday. A charitable fancy fair in aid of Notre Dame Hospital was in progress and a number of ladies fainted. The damage amounted to $2,000, but nobody was hurt. The Woodstock hotel in Woodstock, which cost $22,000 to build, was sold last week for $3,500, and the Royal hotel in Thamesford, which cost $6,000 a few years ago, was sold the other day for $1,950. The recent speech of the Right Hon. Mr. Chamberlain, President of the British Board of Trade, in moving the second reading of the Merchant Shipping Bill, occupied three and three-quarter hours, and is said to be one of the longest ever delivered in the House of Commons. He spoke without pausing even to take a drink of water, giving utterance to what would fill sixteen or seventeen columns of the Times. Competition in Advertising. The lengths to which keen competition carries modern advertising would make a better book than has yet appeared. There is hardly any field of labor in which so much ingenuity, fancy, skill and money is expended, all of which, of course, everybody knows. Tennyson not long ago wrote a poem for an Eastern magazine for the confessed purpose of advertising it. He received $15,000 for the effort. Now I hear he has been offered $100,000 for a poem advertising a certain manufacturer's wares. My Lord Alfred, most people will be inclined to remark, will be a goose if he doesn't accept. Advertising has given a certain impetus to art. Not a few of the struggling young artists owe much of the encouragement they have received to go on to the liberality of merchants who buy their pictures to catch custom with. The most original and cleverest idea I have heard of, however, is that of a Chicago man who proposes to hire a phalanx of bald-heads, paint the name of his compound upon their shiny scalps, and exhibit them every night in their historic front-row seats at the theatres.—"Lomger," in the Chicago Inter-Ocean. Disqualified. "John," said a father to his son, "you have disappointed me greatly. I have given you every opportunity to learn something, but it has been just money thrown away. You are the stupidest young man I ever saw. You know nothing." "It is true, father," said John, with a sigh. "I never see you with a book in your hand," pursued the father; "you never take up a newspaper; you know nothing of current events. You don't take after your mother or me, for we've both got good natural intelligence. What you're going to do to earn your living is a puzzle to me. There isn't a single earthly thing that you can turn your hand to." "But I'm not altogether an imbecile, father. I can count up to a hundred." "I know it and that's what vexes me." "Why?" "Why, don't you see, if you didn't know that much you would make an excellent jurymen for criminal trials, but your knowing that much entirely disqualifies you. It's a sad case."—Somerville Journal. Oddities of Every Day Life. A Delaware farmer has ploughed under 40,000 herrings as a fertilizer. An Ogleshorpe, Ga., boy has invented a cash drawer for which he has refused $10,000. A Leadville girl named Daily is reported to have coughed up a needle on Monday which she lost in her knee a year ago. New York pickpockets have a new dodge of securing ladies' purses. A boy of 14 or 15 strolls along behind a lady and bounces a rubber ball on the sidewalk so that it rises and falls close to her dress. While she is watching the motion of the ball her pocket is quickly rifled. Miss Jennie Casaday, of Louisville, who is incurably confined to her bed as an invalid, is nevertheless prominent as superintendent of a flower mission, and now she wants to send bouquets, on June 9th, to all the prisons, penitentiaries and reformatories in the United States. She thinks it will humanize the inmates while the flowers last. California Mirages. We have all seen on the plains here, says the Colusa Sun, beautiful sheets of water in appearance, in which men would look like giants, sheep like buffalo, and small houses like great castles. Portions of a level plain will sometimes seem to rise and a ridge appear, where, in fact, there is no ridge. The prettiest mirage we ever saw, however, appeared to us the other day just above Jacinto. A field of bright yellow poppies was raised to an apparent height of about twenty feet, so that they appeared as an immense bouquet set in a sheet of water. The delusion was so perfect that it was hard to realize the fact that these flowers were on level land, perhaps lower than the intervening country, and that they were really not over a foot high and on a dry plain. An English doctor reports the case of a lady who had a regularly recurring series of abscesses upon the ankles. On entering her sitting-room one day he noticed a pair of her shoes, and on the impulse of the moment, he directed his patient to use a large broad-heeled shoe. She did so, and had no trouble for two years. Her former shoes had a long, tapering heel, set nearly in the middle of the sole. A Detroit despatch says John M. and Elisha Warner, who nearly killed Treasurer Cruson, of Lafayette, Gratiot County have both been sentenced. John gets ten years and Elisha four. They are Canadians, hailing from Guelph, and attacked Cruson with the intention of robbing him. The Hungarian papers, and especially those of Jew-baiting proclivities, now declare that the money of German Jews was liberally used and was largely instrumental in fomenting the recent election riots in Hungary. A similar feeling against the Jews and Germans is also prevalent throughout Bohemia, and has just found expression in the formation of the Boehmer Waldbund, an anti-German league, at Prague, with branches throughout the country. Three tramps commanded a woman at Crestline, Ohio, to cook a breakfast for them. She said coolly that she would do it; but she brought in a cooked pistol instead of food, and they fled for their lives. She had more bravery than strength, however, and has since been a raving maniac. Speaking of Sir William Thompson's announcement of a belief in a "possible magnetic sense," the Allentist Neurologist thinks that we might as well be logical and liberal, and add to the present senses the touch sense, the self sense, the power sense, the logical sense, and the psychic, muscular, and electro-magnetic senses. To divide and sub-divide is believed to be a rowing habit with medical writers.

HOW TO MAKE ICE CREAM.

Seasonable Hints About the Summer Dessert of Which Most People Are Fond. At home it is quite impossible to produce all the many varieties of ice cream without more or less care and expense. "The secret of making good ice cream of any grade," said Miss Juliet Corson, whose recipes are here given, "lies in the freezing. The old way of freezing cream, which is still in use among small confectioners, consisted of occasionally stirring the cream while it was freezing in a tin can, set in a tub of ice and salt. A more easy and expeditious method is within the reach of the average housekeeper in these days of patent freezers. The same principle underlies all the best known patents—i. e., the mixing of the cream by a wooden beater, which revolves inside the can by the same motion that slightly changes the position of the can in the outer tub of ice and salt. This freezing mixture should be composed of three parts of crushed ice to one of coarse salt, of which care should be taken that it does not reach high enough around the sides of the can to penetrate to the interior and so spoil the cream. The water formed in the outer tub by the melting of the freezing mixture need not be drawn off while the cream is being frozen unless it is likely to get into the can, because the water is intensely cold. If it is desired to pack the cream after it is frozen, the water may be drawn off and enough more ice and salt placed around the can to reach nearly to the top. Ice cream packed in this way can be kept over night, or longer, if the freezing mixture is properly renewed. When ice cream is 'molded' or packed in moulds of fancy shapes, all the openings should be closed with butter or oiled paper fixed about the apertures of the moulds with paste or gum tragacanth. "Ice creams of the most ordinary sort are made with milk thickened with arrow-root or corn starch in the proportion of a tablespoonful to a quart dissolved in cold water and then boiled in the milk, which is cooled, sweetened and flavored before it is frozen. The sort of ice cream usually made at home is composed of milk with a small proportion of cream, with eggs and sugar added to it; for instance, dissolve half a pound of sugar in a quart of milk; place it over the fire and let it heat to boiling point; meantime beat three eggs to cream, pour the boiling milk into them and then return to the fire and stir until it begins to thicken; then at once remove it from the fire; stir until it is smooth; then flavor it, cool it, and when it is cool freeze it according to directions given. Frozen custard is made in the same way, only five eggs at least are added to a quart of milk. "French ice-cream, thick and yellow, is made by boiling a quart of cream with a long vanilla bean, and cooling and straining it; then the yolks of twelve eggs are beaten smooth with a quarter of a pound of sugar; the cream is then mixed with the eggs and stirred over the fire until it begins to thicken; directly the cream begins to thicken, take it from the fire and stir it for five minutes; then cool and freeze it."—New York Evening Post. Niagara Mystery Cleared Up. The impenetrable mystery that has hitherto shrouded the tragedy on Luna Island, Niagara Falls, in which Mr. Pearson lost his life, as was supposed at the hands of his brother-in-law, Vedder, and which was deepened by the latter's complete disappearance, bids fair to be cleared up at last, the body of the latter having been found yesterday in a good state of preservation in the Cave of the Winds. An inquest will be held to-day. An Oswego (N. Y.) firm has orders for a million torchlight handles, in view of the approaching political campaign. The thirteen-year locusts have appeared in East Feliciana parish, Louisiana, but not in sufficient numbers to do any damage. The inscription on Beaconsfield's bust in Westminster Abbey is "Lord Beaconsfield, twice Premier of England." Two hundred and twenty-five thousand persons live in furnished lodgings in Paris, and most of them possess no reserve of pecuniary resources whatever. The poor and despised are much given to boasting; they feel that their position is equivocal and they brag to make it less so. It has been said of Millet's "Angelus" that it is the only picture in which sound has been painted. CELTIC MORALIZING.—Scene—A shieling in the north. Westchester County, New York, is suffering great damages from the ravages of the apple worm, the pests being so numerous that people are obliged to take the middle of the road to avoid being covered by them as they drop from the trees. Earl Granville and M. Waddington have agreed upon the basis of the conference of Egyptian affairs. They affirm the principle of a temporary occupation of Egypt by England, to which, however, no limit is fixed, and propose an international control of the powers to audit the whole system of revenue and expenses of Egypt. England recognizes the suzerain rights of the Porte throughout Egypt, including the Soudan, and France formally abandons all claim to a dual control. The lazy and the industrious can never live happily together; the lazy despise the industrious too much. Be loving, and you will never want for love; be humble, and you will never want for guiding. A paper read before the Forestry Congress estimated the cost of the railroad ties used in the United States every seven years at $14,784,000. Because it is silly to believe everything, there are some so wondrous wise as to believe nothing.

A DOCTOR'S QUESTION.

Extraordinary Action by a Father who Caught Diphtheria from his Child. Medical men, says the New York Times, will be relieved by the result which has been reached in a singular case before the English courts. The plaintiff was the father of a child who suffered from "croup." It being necessary to insert a tube in the child's throat to relieve it from threatened suffocation, the operation was skillfully performed. After the insertion of the tube the physicians requested the father to free it from the accumulated matter with his lips, which he instantly did, the doctors neglecting to tell him that he incurred any risk. The child died, and its disease proved to have been diphtheria, by which the father, in turn, was soon attacked. He sued the doctors for damages. The case was tried twice, and was much discussed in the English press. Upon the first trial the jury disagreed. But Lord Coleridge told the second jury that the doctors were right in telling the father to free the tube, and a verdict for the defendants was found. The principle, we suppose, is that it is no part of a doctor's duty to incur danger in the discharge of his profession, when the act to be performed requires no particular skill and can be devolved upon another standing in relations of blood and affection to the patient. The Origin of Dixie. On a Saturday night in 1859, when Dan Emmett was a member of Bryant's Minstrels, New York, Dan Bryant came to him and said: "Dan, can't you get up a 'walk around' I want something new and lively for Monday night." Dan went to work and by Sunday afternoon he had the words commencing "I Wish I Was in Dixie." This expression was not Southern, but appeared among the circus people of the North. In early fall, when nipping frosts would overtake the tented wanderers, the boys would think of the warmth of the South, and the common expression would be: "Well, I wish I was in Dixie." This gave the catch-line, and the rest of the song was original. On Monday morning it was rehearsed and highly commended, and at night a crowded house caught up the refrain and half of them went home singing Dixie. The song became the rage, and W. W. Newcomb's, Buckley's Minstrels and others gave Dan $500 each for the privilege of using it. Mr. Werlean wrote to Dan Emmett to secure the copyright, but, without waiting for a reply, published it with words from Mr. Peters. Pond, of New York, secured it from Emmett for $600; but Werlean sold thousands of copies without giving him a nickel. Not only was Emmett robbed of the profits of his song, but the authorship of it was disputed. Will S. Hayes claimed it as his own. Pond brought the matter before a music publishers' convention, and settled the authorship; but Dan reaped no benefit from this tarty justice.—Oakland Times. One of those rare birds, a white robin, was seen at Plymouth, Mass., a few days ago. In order to impart dignity to the town of Maroa, Ill., forty of the merchants have signed a pledge to wear high silk hats, instead of the wide-brimmed slouches that have been in fashion there. Falsehood is in a hurry; it may be at any moment detected and punished. Truth is calm, serene; its judgment is on high; its king cometh out of the chambers of eternity.
