THORAH.

One of the greatest public nuisances and one that we can, and ought to keep within the premises is the rooting hog. There is a particular kind in which the bump of "rootiveness" seems more largely developed than the rest. I refer to the "razor-back" or "racer" which can climb a fence, run down a cow, or chew oyster cans with ease. The roads along their haunts look as if the Govern ment had been testing some 34 rounders there, and if we want our roads to look decent these fellows have to be either shut up or ringed.

Quite a number of our young people "took in" the pic-nic in McGregor's grove, Mara, on Friday last.

Statue labor is now in progress an some of our concessions present quite an animated appearance.

To-day we see a flock of sheep, sleek, fat-looking and graceful; to-morrow the same flock look lean, hungry and altogether the most "sheepish-looking" crowd you ever saw. Such is life.
