

A LEAP TO SAVE LIFE.

The Heroism of Frank Neumann, who Dragged a Boy from a Telegraph Wire.

Johnny Macintover is a chubby little fellow of 7 years, who lives with his parents at No. 144 Hester street, New York.

On Sunday morning, about 9 o'clock, Johnny Macintover was flying a kite on the roof of the factory.

Luckily for Johnny the telegraph wires at this point are very high above the street, and the boy after falling about ten feet, by a good fortune that was hardly less than a miracle, caught one of the lower wires in his hands and hung there, about fifty feet above the ground.

A few persons had seen the little fellow fall, and in a moment a crowd had gathered. Unable to render the slightest assistance the people stood paralyzed with horror, gazing up at the boy dangling between heaven and earth.

"Hold on tight and I'll save you!" cried Frank Neumann, a youth of 18 years, who lives in the same house with Johnny. He had been lying on the top of the house, and, attracted by the noise, he ran to the edge of the roof.

Without losing a moment, Neumann clambered over the edge of the roof, and supporting himself by his fingers on the narrow line of brick outside the guard, hung directly over the fire escape.

"Oh, Frank," cried the lad, "do hurry up if you're going to do anything. I can't stand this any more. I'm going to drop."

"Hold on tight a minute longer and I'll be there," shouted Neumann.

Swinging his body backward and forward like a pendulum he cleared the wall and let go his hold. Like an arrow he shot down through the trap in the fire escape at the fifth floor, and caught with his hands the iron rounds of the ladder between the fourth and fifth stories.

A loud cheer went up from the crowd in the street. It was a fearful leap, but a successful one.

"You'll have to move lively, Frank," said the boy. "I must let go."

"Just one moment yet," said the young man. He got a precarious hold on the ladder with his feet and one arm, and leaned far out so that he could just grasp the lad's wrist.

The little fellow's face was white. "Frank, I wouldn't try that again, if I was you," was all he said. Then he ran away and hid himself in a cellar, where he remained two hours, fearing the paternal wrath.—New York Herald.

HIS FILE FOR A SQUARE MEAL.

An Anecdote of Bonanza Mackay.

In the first months of 1860 times were tough on the Comstock. Supplies could not be brought over the mountains from California, and before spring many of the Comstockers went hungry to bed about three nights a week.

Jack McAffrey was taken in on the understanding that he was to furnish wood for the household, and Johnnie Walker in consideration of his doing all the cooking. The newcomers brought their blankets and slept on the floor.

These credentials having been duly delivered, the recipient of the epistle wrote a similar message to some one else, till the unfortunate letter-carrier had made a tour of the parish.

As times grew rough and grub scarce the number of lodgers in the cabin increased. Jack McAffrey was taken in on the understanding that he was to furnish wood for the household, and Johnnie Walker in consideration of his doing all the cooking.

"All right then. We will begin watching his house early next week."—Philadelphia Call.

Sir Lepel Griffin on Niagara.

On the whole, and always excepting the Chicago pig-shambles, I am disposed to think Niagara the sight best worth seeing in America, though I will never return there until the paper-mill shall have been removed.

THE STAGE-DRIVER'S STORY.

How General Scott's Life was Saved, and How His Driver Twice Escaped Death.

The traveller of the present day, as he hurried along by the lightning express, is its buffet cars and palace sleepers, seldom reverts in thought to the time when the stage coach and packet were the only means of communication between distant points.

BARGAIN BUYERS.

How They Sometimes Get Left—A Congregation Scandalized by its Pastor's Sermons.

Very absurd stories might be told of the experiences of bargain buyers. There is a tale of a country parish, too poor to afford an organ or harmonium, the vicar of which secured as a sale a very large musical box, which played the "Old Hundred" and other hymn tunes.
