A Long Lease Just Expired.

Nine hundred and ninety-nine years ago the Church of England, then under the headship of the Church of Rome, leased a lot of land to the British Government for a long term, that was considered in that day equivalent to an estate in fee. But the lease has just expired and the land has gone back to the Church of England, which has changed its coat several times since Henry VII's day, but has preserved throughout its corporate integrity. Nine hundred and ninety-nine years is not forever, and the expiration of this lease and the reversion of the property to the lessor is a significant sign of the stability of the Anglo-Saxon Government as well as of its churches. Dynasties have changed, revolutions have swept the little island from stem to stem, but the state and the church have remained and their contracts are held good after a millenium. Probably no other country can show a like proof of business stability.—[Boston Transcript.]

What He Thinks Of It.

New York, Sept. 18.—Hon Chauncey M. Depew arrived in the city from Europe this afternoon and was met and entertained to luncheon by about 150 employees of the Hudson river railroad. In a speech, he said, among other things: "The best thing for patriotism is to go abroad. If all anarchists, socialists and dissatisfied people of this country would go to Europe for a few years they would come back enthusiastic Americans and covered with flags. They would be the most enthusiastic admirers of American institutions you ever saw. The most delightful thing outside of the United States is English hospitality, but the most satisfactory place for a man to live and end his days is in the United States." Mr. Depew told of the time when he visited the Emperor of Germany, the Prince of Wales and Hon. Wm. E. Gladstone. Of the latter, he said: "He is 70 years of age, alert and with the physical and mental vigor of a man of thirty." Mr. Depew said that he noticed one thing that troubled him greatly. That was the decline of American orators and the increase of English orators. He was also impressed that Europe was but an armed camp. "All the youth and muscle lies idle under arms, while the women till the field and the people are taxed to support them. In this country there are 60,000,000 of people with an army that cannot be found with the aid of a microscope and a navy that a coal boat could run over and they are as happy as can be."

A Cheeky Judge.

A division court was held recently in Mount Forest, Ontario. Near the court room was located a foundry which was in operation and making a humming noise; annoying Judge Chadwick, who was holding the court. To make things pleasant for his Honor he ordered the bailiff to notify the proprietors that the order of the court was to stop the noise. They did not just see things in the same way as the dispenser of the law, and thought they had the right to do their business on their own premises and replied that they would stop when the work was done. A message came back from the same functionary that a fine of $20 would be imposed for contempt of court, unless the order was complied with, and the reply was to fine away. When and how the dispute might have ended is not known had not the mayor tendered his good offices to bring it to an end for the time being. He managed to get the foundry men to cease operating the machine which offended the sensitive ear of the judge, but they sent in their bill for damages. Whether the bill can be collected is not yet known.

It looks rather like high-handed proceedings. If business can be stopped in this summary way, the question of having court rooms on wheels might be worth considering. It is possible some old enactments may be resurrected from the distant past which confers on judges some arbitrary power. They seem to think they are a privileged class and can do pretty much as they please.

Tiring of Retaliation Talk.

The President's message to the Senate regarding the fisheries disputes and the canal tolls question is not of a blustering kind, and it is certainly not such a document as a writer would prepare who was anxious to prove the necessity of putting retaliation into force. The Senate asked the President to lay before it all the correspondence which passed between the United States Government and the British Government concerning the alleged harsh and unjust treatment of American fishing vessels by the Canadian Government and regarding the canals discrimination. The Republican majority of the Senate had a shrewd idea that few, if any, remonstrances had been offered on either subject and the documents laid before the Senate prove that the supposition was well founded, and that, as a matter of fact, during a year and a-half only one case of interference with American vessels had occurred and there had been no cause for complaint. In default of documents showing that remonstrances had been offered, the President sends a message explaining that owing to the friendly relations brought about by the treaty negotiations there had been no trouble. He ought to have explained that a couple of years of firm resistance of unlawful intrusion has taught the American fishermen to respect Canadian law and kept them out of Canadian waters except when licensed to enter. Although the alleged canal toll discrimination has been in operation for three or four years, it was only in July last, when the Presidential campaign was well in sight, that either party began to bluster about the injustice of the arrangement, and only then the United States Secretary of State addressed a letter of remonstrance to the British Minister. The Republican majority have succeeded in showing that the Executive had really no quarrel with the British Government, and that the Democratic move of retaliation was a mere campaign dodge. The common sense of the people of the United States is beginning to assert itself and both parties seem inclined to hark back from the foolishly hostile and aggressive attitude taken a few weeks ago to tickle the unthinking. The Republican Senators will, it is believed, strike out of the Retaliation bill now before Congress the clause empowering the President to stop railway traffic between the United States and Canada. The President will probably go further in the same direction by refusing to put any part of the Act into operation.

The Toronto Court House scheme is making astonishing strides. It began as a $200,000 structure. Soon the price was doubled, then $200,000 was spent for a site and the estimated cost was again advanced, first to $800,000 and later to $1,100,000. Tenders now in for the erection of the building place the figure at $1,305,000, which will probably reach two millions when completed. It is pointed out that this is about thirteen dollars worth for every man, woman and child in the city.

The will of Archbishop Lynch fyled for probate leaves all property to his successor, but directs that in consideration thereof, he shall pay to his sister, Mrs. Eliza McDonald, Dundalk, Ireland, one hundred dollars per year as long as she lives. The personal estate of the late Archbishop is valued at $1,444,09, made up as follows: Cash on hand, $925; cash in bank, $334.84; wearing apparel and personal effects, about one hundred dollars. He directs that two hundred masses shall be said for the repose of his soul.

An exchange says:—Nothing in an editor's experience seems so supremely ridiculous as to have some irate subscriber step in and order his paper stopped because something has been published not exactly to his taste. He forgets, of course, that what displeases him tickles a dozen others and when he quits a dozen others begin. A man is really an object of pity who thinks that because he withholds the subscription for a year, he can just step to one side and "hear something drop" as the concern goes into bankruptcy. Another pleasant feature, it permits the individual to indulge in the luxury of borrowing the paper weekly from his poor neighbor, who buys his paper as he does his sugar and pays for it like an honest man.

HAMILTON, Sept. 11.—About 8 o'clock last evening Mrs. Vernon, wife of Dr. Vernon, was entering the bath room in her residence, 78 James street south, when she stumbled on a rug. The lamp fell from her hand and was dashed to pieces; the contents blazed up and caught the clothing of Mrs. Vernon who had fallen among the liquid. She was unable to do anything to save herself and was fatally burned. She died early this morning from the effects of her injuries in great agony.

The Barrie "Advance" says:—"We have it on the best authority that net fishing is being carried on very extensively along the Rama shore of Lake Simcoe and that bass and other fish are being illegally taken. As well as this, light jacks are frequently seen and no doubt a good deal of fish spearing is done. The Inspector should be looking sharply after these violators of the law.
