CAMERON & WESTCOTT.

Kirkfield.
From our own Correspondent.
On Monday evening last two modest females from Eldon Station and Palestine called upon Mr. McLaren at the Manse, and in a very unassuming manner kindly handed him a purse of $7.50, which, with another donation from the same source, amounted to nearly $11.00, accompanied with the following address:—

Mr. McLaren,—Our very dear and respected friend, we the undersigned, take this opportunity of offering you this small gift as a slight token of the respect we entertain towards you for the exemplary zeal you have thus far evinced in the accomplishment of the onerous and responsible work assigned you by him who is the blessed and only potentate. We must in sincerity admit that you are indeed one of those who preach the truth in Christ faithfully and fearlessly. And as a proof that your services are duly appreciated, we need only refer to the large number who assemble regularly to learn from you more fully concerning Him who gave His life as a ransom for sinners. We regret that our present on this occasion is so insignificant and unworthy of acceptance, especially when we believe that much good has been effected among us by you; also when we consider the evident interest you manifest in the spiritual welfare of the congregation committed to your charge. But our knowledge of your goodness of heart assures us that our humble efforts will not be slighted, and that you will favorably accept the "will" for the "deed." We trust though circumstances at present necessitate your separation from us to return to college, that you will be permitted to return to us again, and we hope and pray that the great Head of the church will guide and direct you in all your ways, support and comfort you in all your difficulties, and make you increasingly useful in His vineyard, that you may have very many souls to your ministry when called to give an account of your stewardship, and have an abundant entrance into His everlasting kingdom and glory.

Palatine and Eldon Station Presbyterians.
Shortly after the above incident transpired, crowds began coming into the manse laden with baskets, containing the richest provisions and bags full of the rich products of the farm.
The ladies who are always prominent in every good work, immediately took possession of the tables, which were extended to their utmost capacity, and which were soon laden with the richest spread known to the culinary art, of which Mr. and Mrs. McLaren were invited to partake. Table after table was soon surrounded by the many visitors present. After ample justice had been done to the viands, Mr. and Mrs. McLaren were called forward, when he was presented with a purse containing $50.00, accompanied with the following address:—

Mr. J. B. McLaren, DEAR SIR,—We, a few of your many friends and admirers in this vicinity and from Victoria Road, have much pleasure in conveying here on this occasion for the purpose of tendering you an humble expression of our good will as an acknowledgement of your many faithful and acceptable services in our midst during the short time you have been with us. Now that you are about leaving us for the prosecution of your college work, we have deemed it our duty, as it is our privilege, to give you some tangible proof of our due appreciation of your labors in this corner of the Lord's vineyard, in actions more eloquent than words. This we do by presenting you this purse and these effects, which measure as they are, you will please accept, not merely for the small value they possess, but as a free-will offering of a grateful people. At the same time we would not forget to express our admiration of the estimable character of your partner in life. In Mrs. McLaren we are happy to find that you have a true help-meet, and we are pleased to know that you purpose leaving her with us in the meantime. Dear Sir, we shall gladly accept of her and retain her as a hostage for your return in the spring, to resume the labors which you have so successfully prosecuted during the past summer, as well as of frequent visits from you during the approaching winter.

ROBERT ARMSTRONG, THOMAS THOMSON, JOHN McTAGGART, CHARLES McINNES, JOHN GORDON, NELSON HEASLIP, ALEXANDER MCKENZIE.
On behalf of the members and adherents of the congregation.
To which Mr. McLaren briefly and feelingly replied. The large crowd present then dispersed to their several homes, after spending an enjoyable evening.
